CHICAGO (AP) — Soybeans futures closed nearly 2 cents a bushel higher on the Board of Trade, but an early one-cent gain in wheat prices was erased under profit-taking.

Corn prices were up around half cent at the close but oats were little changed. Soybean oil gained about 5 points but soybean meal was down 25 points.

Trade was fairly mixed but the pace very slow, typical of a pre-holiday session.

On the opening, selling in the soybean pit and buying in wheat appeared to be a carry-over from the previous session. Wheat then closed 2½ cents higher and soybeans 4½ cents lower.

88th YEAR No. 169 ★ VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1971 ★ 10 CENTS DAILY 20 CENTS SATURDAY

PLAYING HOCKEY without ice—and even without skates—can be fun when the snow freezes into a nice slippery surface as these boys discover on Broome Hill Golf and Country Club course on Otter Point Road in Sooke. Victoria's slippery streets are expected to disappear Thursday as a moderating trend is forecast, with temperatures near 40.

Air Attack Opposition Mounting

Times News Services

Opposition to the United States air assault on North Vietnam grew today as the defence department in Washington insisted that the bombing did not represent a return to the policies of the Johnson administration.

The heaviest air attacks in more than three years continued for the fourth day with no letup in sight. North Vietnam said four planes were shot down.

A dispatch broadcast from Hanoi by the official Vietnam News Agency said the F-4 Phantom jets were shot down while attacking "populous areas."

Hanoi says seven American aircraft were downed in previous raids since Sunday.

The leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, Senator Edwin Muskie of Maine, called on President Nixon to halt the bombing.

CALLS ATTACKS SHOCKING

Another presidential contender, Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, also demanded an end to the bombing and asked for an extended ceasefire through the new year and Tet lunar new year holiday, up to Feb. 15.

Senator George McGovern of South Dakota described the air attacks as a shocking escalation of the war and 30 Democratic congressmen sent a telegram to Nixon calling for an end to the raids.

As anti-war Vietnam veterans ended their occupation of New York's Statute of Liberty Tuesday in protest against the raids, others invaded Washington's Lincoln Memorial and were removed by police.

At the Lincoln Memorial the U.S. park police arrested 86 demonstrators who refused to move from the entrance. The protesters placed their hands on their heads in prisoner-of-war fashion and waited for police to lead them to waiting buses. They were charged with blocking the entrance to a building.

TO CONTINUE

In Saigon, military sources said the bombing would continue Thursday. Returning pilots reported seeing MiGs for the first time, and missiles.

The U.S. command reported the MiGs stayed at extreme range and said there was only sporadic anti-aircraft fire, indicating bad weather was forcing the pilots to bomb from high altitudes.

The ground war also intensified after a Christmas lull and reports from Phnom Penh said there were big attacks north and southeast of Phnom Penh and heavy shelling of South Vietnamese bases in the rubber plantation country along the border northwest of Saigon.

B.C. WON'T HIKE SUCCESSION DUTIES

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said today the B.C. government won't increase its succession duties to occupy the 25 per cent of the estate tax field being abandoned by the federal government Jan. 1.

Bennett also said we will have to wait until budget day in early February to find out whether any reductions in the B.C. succession duty are planned. But there would be no increase, he promised.

The provinces have all agreed to a uniform provincial gift tax to replace the federal gift tax, he said. It would be effective Jan. 1, removing any possibility of large estates being passed to children of their owners without succession duties.

About 90 per cent of B.C. residents are unaffected by succession duties under current exemptions, Bennett said.

Russia Sending Help to Dacca

DACCA (UPI) — The Soviet Union and the newly-proclaimed Peoples Republic of Bangla Desh announced plans today to draw up a trade treaty and begin arrangements for Russian engineers and technicians to help rebuild shattered East Pakistan.

The plans to draw up the trade pact "as quickly as possible" were announced after talks between Soviet trade mission chief V. V. Zvreb and Finance Minister M. Mansoor Ali and Home Minister A. H. Kamaruzzaman.

The Bangla Desh government said it needed cotton and electrical equipment as well as cash and technical advice to rebuild agricultural and industrial production which Ali said was "threadbare."

India and Bhutan are the only nations thus far to recognize the state of Bangla Desh but the Soviet actions indicated Russian recognition would be forthcoming shortly.

BRING IN EXPERTS

The minister said "special arrangements" were being made to bring in Soviet experts and their families to resume work on projects started before the war, and help in economic development.

Zvreb said the Soviet Union could supply cotton for the Bangla Desh textile mills and was drafting a proposal for reconstruction of the jute industry, the country's biggest foreign exchange earner.

Zvreb invited Ali to visit Moscow for financial and trade talks at an unspecified date in the future.

The first train from India to reach East Pakistan since the 1965 India-Pakistan war has arrived in Jessore to help with the repatriation of refugees.

STARVATION

It is reported from Narayanganj in East Pakistan that at least 30,000 non-Bengalis face death by starvation or at the hands of vengeance-seeking Bengalis. They are huddled in squalid ghettos inside the world's biggest jute mill at the town 14 miles from Dacca, protected by 400 Indian soldiers.

Indian officials said in New Delhi they believed a fight which broke the cease-fire along the western front of India and Pakistan Tuesday was an isolated incident and didt not indicate an immediate resumption of the war.

Bid Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — The government rejected today an NDP proposal that all directors of the public Canada Development Corp. divest themselves of all other directorships because of possible conflict of interest. These directors would not allow themselves to become involved in any conflict-of-interest situations.

Egypt Ready for War But Willing to Deal

CAIRO (CP) — President Anwar Sadat told a political meeting Tuesday that Egypt is completing preparations to go to war against Israel, but he did not close the door on diplomatic efforts for a peace settlement, the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram reported today.

"The battle of liberation is a must and we have already taken an irrevocable decision for it," Sadat said.

"But the question of timing is connected with delicate internal and international assessments that are the competence of the leadership and not for public debate."

Sadat, who has pledged that 1971 will be "the year of decision" in the Middle East, spoke at a meeting of members of the People's Assembly—parliament—and the central committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party.

WILL BE LONG BATTLE

"The decision is now under implementation and the battle of liberation will be long and bitter," Sadat emphasized. "But it does not mean that political moves will be halted because to do so will paralyse part of our effective potential."

Sadat was strongly critical of U.S. policy in the Middle East and made clear he rejects suggestions for the resumption of U.S.-sponsored negotiations for an interim Suez Canal settlement.

Sadat said he had received no reply to his accusation that there was a secret agreement between former president Lyndon Johnson and Israel on a joint plan which he said was still operative and was being implemented now.

Sadat said none of the U.S. officials had denied this report.

U.K. ANNOUNCES MALTA PULLOUT

LONDON (UPI)—Britain announced today it is pulling all its forces out of the strategic Mediterranean island of Malta, even at risk of a Soviet takeover.

The foreign office said the government decided on this action after Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, in an ultimatum received today, demanded immediate payment of another $11 million for the right to station British forces on the island.

Failing this, the foreign office said, Mintoff demanded all the 3,500 British troops, airmen and sailors on the island leave by Dec. 31.

British government sources said Britain and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies are anxious that the island's facilities should not be taken over by the Soviets.

But the sources said they do not consider the island's strategic value worth the money demanded in Mintoff's ultimatum.

The Soviet Union recently signed a trade agreement with Malta and diplomatic sources in London said this was another step in the Soviet hope of establishing naval facilities on Malta for its growing Mediterranean fleet.

Malta has served as a naval base for the Royal Navy for 170 years.

Policeman Shot; Teenager Tarred

BELFAST (Reuter) — A British army doctor attended today to a 17-year-old youth who was tarred and feathered and tied to a swing in a children's playground.

The youth received medical attention after freeing himself and staggering to a nearby army post, a military spokesman said. Tarring and feathering is used by the outlawed Irish Republican Army to punish criminal offenders, but the reason for its use in this case was not immediately clear.

A policeman was hit in the arm by one of six shots fired at a patrol car 15 miles south of Londonderry in Strabane, and 35 miles farther south bombs damaged an electricity transformer and a cattle yard at Enniskillen near the border.

But the real focus of interest today was what appeared to be the collapse of a planned British Broadcasting Corp. television special on solutions for the Ulster crisis, under pressure from the British and Ulster governments and a campaign against it by the London Daily Telegraph.

Eight of Britain's nine national daily newspapers front-paged the story and three—The Sun, The Guardian and The Times—commented on it editorially.

The program originally was planned to run for about two hours live next Wednesday with appearances by representatives of the Irish Republic government, the Belfast government and a spectrum of unofficial opinion including Rev. Ian Paisley and Bernadette Devlin.

London refused to take part and Paisley dropped out Tuesday night, saying: "I accepted the invitation to take part on the understanding that the Stormont (Northern Ireland) government would be repre-

U.S. WON'T CUT TROOPS IN EUROPE

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon concluded two days of summit talks with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt today by pledging there will be no reduction in American troops stationed in Europe.

The pledge was contained in a joint statement issued by the two world leaders following their private talks at Nixon's Key Biscayne villa.

He said he and Brandt were in "substantial agreement" on the economic problems facing the United States and Europe, and on the issue of maintaining troops on the continent.

To re-emphasize America's commitment to the Atlantic Alliance, Nixon announced he was appointing ambassador-at-large David Kennedy as ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

A-G SEEKS MORE TOP 'N' BOTTOM

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said today he wants laws enforced against topless and bottomless dancing.

"I'm bringing it to the attention of those charged with enforcing the laws," Peterson said, indicating he is primarily concerned about the situation in Vancouver where topless and bottomless dancers have been employed in entertainment clubs.

"As attorney-general I disapprove of this type of activity," Peterson said. He said a general increase in the field had been noted and was causing concern. He wasn't acting on any specific complaints, he indicated.

Peterson didn't specify how quickly he would like action taken or under what laws it might be taken.

Bank Gang Caught

SAARBRUECKEN (Reuter) — The ringleader of three bank bandits who led police on a chase across West Germany since Monday was shot and wounded and his two accomplices captured by police today during a brief gun battle.

The end of a manhunt came after the bandits seized a 15-year-old boy as a new hostage in a bid to buy their freedom.

But the young hostage was not hurt when police attacked the trio of bandits.

The three robbed a Cologne bank of $97,500 Monday and fled from the bank with two police officers as hostages.

They freed the pair after seven hours and fled on foot into a forested area near the French border.

The three robbers, believed to be an Austrian, a Frenchman and an Italian, were chased by 600 police and helicopters and were at various times reported to be on the French side of the border.

The shootout today occurred after they seized a car and tried to escape.

Police said they would have needed 4,000 men to search the forested area into which the men fled. It was pitted with ruined bunkers and tank-traps left over from the Second World War.

Tracking Dogs Hunt for Clues

BURNABY (CP) — Police in Burnaby were using tracking dogs today to search the snow for clues in the murder of a woman whose body was found outside a restaurant here.

The woman, about 30, was believed to have been dumped from a car sometime during the night.

One Man's Formula For Staying Sane

PHILADELPHIA (Reuter) — Insensitivity to the world around him is the only way a sane man can cope with modern civilization, a Canadian psychologist says.

The argument for insensitivity is so great, says Dr. Lawrence La Fave of the University of Windsor, Ont., that he does not understand why sensitivity training through nude encounter groups has become a fad. He recommends insensitivity training through nudeless groups.

The psychologist running the group should be insensitive enough to get as many persons as possible in the group and clip them enormous amounts of money. That way the psychologist can set a good example.

The need for insensitivity is obvious, La Fave reports.

"Consider the merchant," he said in a paper delivered Monday to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

In order to "succeed in our sick, status-seeking, rat-racing society, he must be sufficiently insensitive to foreclose the mortgage on that poverty-stricken widow with 10 kids. The ladder of success is fashioned on human bodies."

"It is common knowledge that a surgeon should not operate on his wife. He's too nervous or emotionally sensitive to do a good job. . . ."

"A successful Bowery bum does not permit sensitivity to the condescending stares of passersby to prevent his hand from reaching out."

Athletes must be insensitive to pain to succeed. Prostitutes never become sensitive enough to give it away for free, La Fave said.

The answer is a desensitivity program. One must start with desensitivity to one's own hypocrisy, the psychologist said.

Desensitivity group sessions would help, but everyone in the session should be nudeless. Nudeness leads to sensitivity.

Instead of trying to get to know each other better, persons at such sessions would be given ear muffs and nose plugs and "are instructed not to taste or touch each other and to shut up."

La Fave's paper was delivered in a symposium on humor in science.

The plans to draw up the trade pact "as quickly as possible" were announced after talks between Soviet trade mission chief V. V. Zvreb and Finance Minister M. Mansoor Ali and Home Minister A. H. Kamaruzzaman.

Zvreb said the Soviet Union could supply cotton for the Bangla Desh textile mills and was drafting a proposal for reconstruction of the jute industry, the country's biggest foreign exchange earner.

Zvreb invited Ali to visit Moscow for financial and trade talks at an unspecified date in the future.

The first train from India to reach East Pakistan since the 1965 India-Pakistan war has arrived in Jessore to help with the repatriation of refugees.

Indian officials said in New Delhi they believed a fight which broke the cease-fire along the western front of India and Pakistan Tuesday was an isolated incident and didt not indicate an immediate resumption of the war.

Find the Right Words And History Is Made

I have been patiently waiting for someone with more competence to mark the hundredth anniversary of Stanley's meeting with Livingstone and the occasion of those immortal words: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" but the actual date, Nov. 10, 1871, has come and gone and I mustn't let the year slip away without doing my duty.

You'll be wondering why a mere strip of a lad (me) should care about a man whose exploits took place a full century ago, but the bizarre fact is that if Sir Henry Morton Stanley hadn't lived and hadn't done what he did I wouldn't be sitting at this Remington Standard this red hot minute. He was my father's boyhood hero, the example that took him into newspapering, and my father was my boyhood hero and that's how it was. I'd have been happier, perhaps, if my old man had been inspired by J. Pierpont Morgan, but fate is funny that way.

Stanley's place in history rests on his meeting with Livingstone (at Ujiyi on the shores of Lake Tanganyika) and, more importantly, his later discovery and development of the Congo, but my father's interest in him was not as an intrepid explorer, but only as a journalist.

When my father joined the Winnipeg Free Press as a junior reporter he was fully prepared to travel to the ends of the earth to earn what Stanley, more than slightly egocentric, referred to as "the kudos." Instead, the Free Press gave him a bicycle and sent him out on the hotel beat. He'd have made Stanley a bum if they'd given him an elephant and an assignment in darkest Africa, but my father never regretted his choice and loved the newspaper business all the days of his life.

★ ★ ★

"I was weaned, so to speak, on "How I Found Livingstone" and "Through the Dark Continent" and the other splendid books by Stanley. Come to think of it, my own earliest dreams of finding fame and fortune as a fearless correspondent were enflamed, I suspect, by that unforgettable scene when James Gordon Bennett, who owned the New York Herald, summonsed Stanley and, in just two words, gave him the assignment: "Find Livingstone."

Livingstone wasn't all that lost, mind you. He'd simply disappeared after 1866 on his expedition to find the source of the Nile, though he'd been pretty much abandoned by his sponsors.

The eventual meeting at Ujiyi has long since been neatly packaged by the anecdotal historians, those academic re-write boys who delight in retailing it as an example of British reserve and formality. In fact it was one of the most emotion-charged, poignant moments imaginable.

Stanley, for all his genius, was a loud-mouthed, arrogant, hard-nosed, harsh and humorless man, but on that night before the meeting, when Selim, his safari chief, brought the news that poor old Livingstone was waiting somewhere up ahead on the lake shore, my father's hero seemed something less than a man of iron.

"What would I not have given," he wrote later in his autobiography, "for a bit of friendly wilderness where, unseen, I might vent my joy in some mad freak, such as idiotically biting my hand, turning a somersault, or slashing at trees, in order to allay those exciting feelings that were well-nigh uncontrollable. My heart beat fast, but I must not let my face betray my emotions, lest it shall detract from the dignity of a white man appearing under such circumstances."

The confrontation, itself, was by no means as casual and abrupt as the legend-makers have made it seem.

★ ★ ★

Stanley remembered: "I took off my hat and said, 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume?' 'Yes,' he said, with a kind smile, lifting his cap slightly. I replaced my hat on my head and he replaced his cap and we both grasped hands, and then I said aloud, 'I thank God, Doctor, I have been permitted to see you.' He answered, 'I feel thankful that I am here to welcome you'."

I was always interested in that particular scene because my father had developed a theory that the meeting would never have occurred had it not been for that deathless phrase.

It was clear from his journals and the stories that he sent back to the Herald, in my father's opinion, that Stanley was more than once tempted to give up the search. He had been a full 14 months on the road, by way of Jerusalem, Constantinople, the Crimea, Persia and way points. The subsequent expedition into Africa in search of Livingstone was keeping him out of the public eye, far from the kudos he loved. There were serious doubts in his own mind if it was worth all the effort.

"Being a great newspaperman," my father would speculate, "Stanley had probably given plenty of thought to what he would say if, in fact, he met up with Livingstone. It was crucial to the story, you see, that the encounter should be dramatized in some absolutely classic words. He probably lay awake in his tent at night thinking of this.

"He could say, 'Well! If it isn't Dr. Livingstone!' Or he could say, 'Howdy! My name is Stanley!' Or he could say, 'You must be the fellow I'm looking for.' None of them, of course, would do. Then, as I see it, it came to him. 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume!' It had everything. It made the story, don't you see? And so he kept on and the rest was history."

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Remember when postage for a letter always cost five cents?

That was only three years ago.

Then the Canadian government raised it to six cents and took away Saturday delivery.

Now that you are barely used to that, the price will go up to eight cents starting New Year's Day.

The new rate applies to letters within Canada, the United States, its territories and possessions and the tiny French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

Big Workshirt Issue Still Burning Question

Victoria's so-called burning workshirts burn very poorly at best, according to deputy fire chief Carl Coates.

Coates said today that he bought one of the shirts at Zeller's department store Tuesday; tested it but found it did not burn well. The Fire Marshall's office in Vancouver is conducting further tests.

A controversy over the shirts began smouldering Monday after a Saanich man reported finding the nap of his green and black checked workshirt burning after he lit a cigarette.

Saanich police tested the shirt, said it was "quite flammable" and advised anyone who bought one to return it to the store.

But Coates suggested that people observe a cooling off period until the Fire Marshall's report takes the heat off — or turns it on — depending on how their tests go.

Coates said he wanted to point out that all materials are combustible to a greater or lesser degree.

"Even concrete will burn," he observed.

The deputy said "the old match test" will give an indication of how a fabric will burn.

Coates said the workshirt had "minute particles" on the surface as part of the finish but he added that these would probably disappear in the first washing.

Ask The Times

Q. Please tell me about the Flying Scotsman locomotive. When was it built and when did it tour North America?— W.B.

A. The Flying Scotsman was built in 1922 and inaugurated the first non-stop passenger service from London to Edinburgh. A steam engine, it travelled the 393 miles in 8 hours, 15 minutes.

British millionaire Alan Pegler saved it from destruction a few years ago by buying it from British Railways. By convincing the British government that the train would be useful to promote British exports, he helped finance its U.S. tour.

The Flying Scotsman began a 2,200-mile tour of 12 U.S. cities Oct. 8, 1969. It had nine exhibition cars, including pubs, the Royal Shakespeare Company, and two Edwardian Pullman coaches which were used by Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower during the Second World War.

Hunt Pressed For City Girl

The 55-foot RCMP patrol boat Sidney and the Victoria detachment's Grumman Goose aircraft expanded the search today for two persons presumed lost in a mysterious boating accident Sunday.

Still missing are Charles Richard Feltis of Surrey and Jennifer Ann Smith, 15, daughter of Mrs. Claire Smith, 1525 Amelia, Victoria.

An autopsy to determine cause of death was being carried out at Surrey on the mainland today.

They were reported missing Sunday when they failed to return to a marina at Crescent Beach near White Rock on the mainland.

It was picked up by the coast guard cutter Ready north of East Point on Saturna Island, a distance of between eight and 10 miles from where the body was found.

Maj. Gordon Bissell of the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre said the cause of the accident was still a mystery.

"There were no burn marks on either the body or the debris to indicate an explosion," he said.

He suggested the boat may have been run down by a large vessel during darkness.

Development Bylaw Faces Council Rebuff

Oak Bay council's bylaw designating the controversial Windsor block as a development area is doomed to failure unless two aldermen have a change of heart, the Times learned today.

On Dec. 20 the bylaw was given first, second and third readings. It still needs final reading to make it law.

Ald. Brian Smith, John Goult and Shirley Dowell were against the bylaw. They argued that such a major step should not be taken in the holiday season when people are involved with other matters.

TOO SOON

They also argued that it was too soon after the stormy public hearing that resulted in rejection of a bid by developer John Mace to build two nine-storey high-rises on the site.

Mayor Frances Elford cast the deciding vote for the bylaw, voting with Ald. Norman Pimlott, Alan Hoey and Douglas Watts.

Deputy minister of municipal affairs J. D. Baird, confirmed today that a development bylaw under section 702A of the Municipal Act requires a two-thirds majority to pass its final reading.

FIVE TO TWO

In Oak Bay this means a five to two vote is required to pass final reading. A simple majority is sufficient for first, second and third readings and the vote was 4 to 3 on Dec. 20.

Even if McLelland votes for the bylaw the impasse will remain.

Baird said the recently-introduced development legislation had only one main difference from that governing all zoning matters.

It does not require a public hearing.

This is necessary only when a developer and the council have reached the stage where a land-use contract is to be completed.

Mace has a proposition before council for a scaled-down development on the block which would include an inner courtyard, two four-storey apartment buildings, retail outlets and a service station.

TENDERS CALLED ON UVIC LIBRARY

The University of Victoria Tuesday called for tenders for a $3 million extension to McPherson Library.

Deadline is 2 p.m., Feb. 11, and construction, which will start immediately, is expected to be completed in June of 1973.

I. W. Campbell, acting director of campus planning, said today the extension, which will almost triple existing space of 86,000 square feet will end a situation where a half million books have crowded students out of studying space.

It will take care of library needs until 1981, and what space is not used by the library till then, will be used for other university purposes, Campbell said.

Sewer Cleanup Study Starts

A study aimed at cleaning up two major sources of sea and shore pollution in Greater Victoria is under way.

The Capital Regional District has commissioned a feasibility study of the Clover Point and McMicking Point sewer outfalls by J. F. McLaren Ltd., Ker, Priestman, Keenan and Associates Ltd. and Associated Engineering Services Ltd.

The firms, under project manager Larry McGill of J. F. McLaren Ltd., are expected to submit their report and recommendations by the end of April.

The regional board announced the study last September and said the cost would be not more than $80,000. The three firms were appointed in October but the maximum cost was raised to $95,000. The extra cost was necessitated by "the requirements of the study," said an official.

A general review of sewage disposal alternatives, by Associated Engineering Services Ltd. and Ker, Priestman, Keenan and Associates Ltd., produced a number of alternatives. The regional board narrowed this to two for the study now under way:

1. Diversion of sewage from Clover Point, in Victoria, and McMicking Point, in Oak Bay, through a connecting pipe to the new Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt;

2. Diversion of sewage from Clover Point and McMicking Point to a new outfall to be located offshore from Trial Island.

The general review put the cost of the first alternative at $9.2 million and the cost of the second between $10.1 million and $12.8 million; both including treatment plants costing $4 to $5 million.

The new Macaulay Point outfall, extending 6,100 feet from shore, discharges untreated sewage but land has been reserved for a treatment plant if studies show this is needed.

Clover Point outfall, built in 1894 and serving a major part of the city including down town, discharges sewage a few feet off shore.

McMicking Point outfall, built in 1913 and located near the Oak Bay golf course, serves much of Oak Bay and small parts of Victoria and Saanich. It also discharges a few feet from shore.

WELCOME HAND of Saanich Police Chief W. A. Pearson greets municipality's first full-time policewoman, Marjory Grondahl, 36. Miss Grondahl has been Pearson's secretary and performed department matron duties since August, 1969. Pearson retires Friday.

Metro Health Board Fades Out of '71

Disappearance in '72 Debated

Greater Victoria's metro health board wobbled through its final meeting of the year Tuesday when members agreed the board should disappear but unsure how.

In a pattern which has become traditional in recent months, most issues were pushed on to the next meeting, which in this case means to the new board for 1972.

The longest debate centred on how the health board can shift its job to the Capital Regional Board, a move first proposed about five years ago and actively sought for almost two years.

The transfer has been delayed by lengthy negotiations with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark over a cost-sharing formula. The province has offered to pay two-thirds of the costs with participating municipalities and districts paying the other third.

The board, which represents municipalities and districts from the Gulf Islands to Port Renfrew, has been arguing for a 30-70 split, approximately the basis of current cost-sharing.

Throughout the months of debate there has been growing impatience among Victoria, Esquimalt and Oak Bay representatives because the current formula has Saanich paying less than its proportionate share.

"I believe it to be hopeless at the present time," board chairman Frank Waring said Tuesday of the current administrative set-up.

Direct discussions with Loffmark had failed to budge the provincial government on its cost-sharing offer and Waring said he believed the transfer should take place in any event and an appeal to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell or the cabinet made over cost-sharing at a later date.

All parties, including the province, have agreed moving public health care under the wing of the regional board is a good idea, he said.

But when members came to vote on a resolution to get it under way, there were differences over how and an unwillingness to concede to the provincial cost-sharing offer.

A motion for board members to recommend to their parent bodies that regionalization be proceeded with immediately and to have the cost-sharing issue passed to the regional board was defeated 4-3. Some members wanted the offered formula referred to in the motion and others wanted the sought-after formula specified.

In the end members simply referred the matter to the next meeting, something they have been doing with a number of questions this year as the changeover appeared imminent.

Another issue which took a rough ride before being deferred was proposed regulations governing health conditions at marinas.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, the board's senior public health officer, had drafted the proposals with the idea the board would endorse and propose to the provincial government that they be passed to cover all B.C.

But both North Saanich and Oak Bay councils had argued the matter should be left as a municipal responsibility and there were arguments Tuesday that Whitbread already had authority to enforce health regulations because most waterfront municipalities had extended their jurisdiction 1,000 feet from shore.

Whitbread said there are no health regulations because applying to marinas and he did not have the power to enforce health regulations there.

The matter was put over until he has a chance to clarify the limits of his jurisdiction.

Air Attack Opposition Mounting

Times News Services

Opposition to the United States air assault on North Vietnam grew today as the defence department in Washington insisted that the bombing did not represent a return to the policies of the Johnson administration.

The heaviest air attacks in more than three years continued for the fourth day with no letup in sight. North Vietnam said four planes were shot down.

A dispatch broadcast from Hanoi by the official Vietnam News Agency said the F-4 Phantom jets were shot down while attacking "populous areas."

Hanoi says seven American aircraft were downed in previous raids since Sunday.

The leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, Senator Edwin Muskie of Maine, called on President Nixon to halt the bombing.

CALLS ATTACKS SHOCKING

Another presidential contender, Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, also demanded an end to the bombing and asked for an extended ceasefire through the new year and Tet lunar new year holiday, up to Feb. 15.

Senator George McGovern of South Dakota described the air attacks as a shocking escalation of the war and 30 Democratic congressmen sent a telegram to Nixon calling for an end to the raids.

As anti-war Vietnam veterans ended their occupation of New York's Statute of Liberty Tuesday in protest against the raids, others invaded Washington's Lincoln Memorial and were removed by police.

At the Lincoln Memorial the U.S. park police arrested 86 demonstrators who refused to move from the entrance. The protesters placed their hands on their heads in prisoner-of-war fashion and waited for police to lead them to waiting buses. They were charged with blocking the entrance to a building.

TO CONTINUE

In Saigon, military sources said the bombing would continue Thursday. Returning pilots reported seeing MiGs for the first time, and missiles.

The U.S. command reported the MiGs stayed at extreme range and said there was only sporadic anti-aircraft fire, indicating bad weather was forcing the pilots to bomb from high altitudes.

The ground war also intensified after a Christmas lull and reports from Phnom Penh said there were big attacks north and southeast of Phnom Penh and heavy shelling of South Vietnamese bases in the rubber plantation country along the border northwest of Saigon.

B.C. WON'T HIKE SUCCESSION DUTIES

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said today the B.C. government won't increase its succession duties to occupy the 25 per cent of the estate tax field being abandoned by the federal government Jan. 1.

Bennett also said we will have to wait until budget day in early February to find out whether any reductions in the B.C. succession duty are planned. But there would be no increase, he promised.

The provinces have all agreed to a uniform provincial gift tax to replace the federal gift tax, he said. It would be effective Jan. 1, removing any possibility of large estates being passed to children of their owners without succession duties.

About 90 per cent of B.C. residents are unaffected by succession duties under current exemptions, Bennett said.

Egypt Ready for War But Willing to Deal

CAIRO (CP) — President Anwar Sadat told a political meeting Tuesday that Egypt is completing preparations to go to war against Israel, but he did not close the door on diplomatic efforts for a peace settlement, the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram reported today.

"The battle of liberation is a must and we have already taken an irrevocable decision for it," Sadat said.

"But the question of timing is connected with delicate internal and international assessments that are the competence of the leadership and not for public debate."

Sadat, who has pledged that 1971 will be "the year of decision" in the Middle East, spoke at a meeting of members of the People's Assembly—parliament —and the central committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party.

WILL BE LONG BATTLE

"The decision is now under implementation and the battle of liberation will be long and bitter," Sadat emphasized. "But it does not mean that political moves will be halted because to do so will paralyse part of our effective potential."

Sadat was strongly critical of U.S. policy in the Middle East and made clear he rejects suggestions for the resumption of U.S.-sponsored negotiations for an interim Suez Canal settlement.

Sadat said he had received no reply to his accusation that there was a secret agreement between former president Lyndon Johnson and Israel on a joint plan which he said was still operative and was being implemented now.

Sadat said none of the U.S. officials had denied this report.

U.K. ANNOUNCES MALTA PULLOUT

LONDON (UPI)—Britain announced today it is pulling all its forces out of the strategic Mediterranean island of Malta, even at risk of a Soviet takeover.

The foreign office said the government decided on this action after Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, in an ultimatum received today, demanded immediate payment of another $11 million for the right to station British forces on the island.

Failing this, the foreign office said, Mintoff demanded all the 3,500 British troops, airmen and sailors on the island leave by Dec. 31.

British government sources said Britain and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies are anxious that the island's facilities should not be taken over by the Soviets.

But the sources said they do not consider the island's strategic value worth the money demanded in Mintoff's ultimatum.

The Soviet Union recently signed a trade agreement with Malta and diplomatic sources in London said this was another step in the Soviet hope of establishing naval facilities on Malta for its growing Mediterranean fleet.

Malta has served as a naval base for the Royal Navy for 170 years.

NIXON PLEDGES NO TROOP CUTS

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon concluded two days of summit talks with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt today by pledging there will be no reduction in American troops stationed in Europe.

The pledge was contained in a joint statement issued by the two world leaders following their private talks at Nixon's Key Biscayne villa.

He said he and Brandt were in "substantial agreement" on the economic problems facing the United States and Europe, and on the issue of maintaining troops on the continent.

To re-emphasize America's commitment to the Atlantic Alliance, Nixon announced he was appointing ambassador-at-large David Kennedy as ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

A-G SEEKS MORE TOP 'N' BOTTOM

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said today he wants laws enforced against topless and bottomless dancing.

"I'm bringing it to the attention of those charged with enforcing the laws," Peterson said, indicating he is primarily concerned about the situation in Vancouver where topless and bottomless dancers have been employed in entertainment clubs.

"As attorney-general I disapprove of this type of activity," Peterson said. He said a general increase in the field had been noted and was causing concern. He wasn't acting on any specific complaints, he indicated.

Peterson didn't specify how quickly he would like action taken or under what laws it might be taken.

Bank Gang Caught

SAARBRUECKEN (Reuter) — The ringleader of three bank bandits who led police on a chase across West Germany since Monday was shot and wounded and his two accomplices captured by police today during a brief gun battle.

The end of a manhunt came after the bandits seized a 15-year-old boy as a new hostage in a bid to buy their freedom.

But the young hostage was not hurt when police attacked the trio of bandits.

The three robbed a Cologne bank of $97,500 Monday and fled from the bank with two police officers as hostages.

They freed the pair after seven hours and fled on foot into a forested area near the French border.

The three robbers, believed to be an Austrian, a Frenchman and an Italian, were chased by 600 police and helicopters and were at various times reported to be on the French side of the border.

The shootout today occurred after they seized a car and tried to escape.

Police said they would have needed 4,000 men to search the forested area into which the men fled. It was pitted with ruined bunkers and tank-traps left over from the Second World War.

Tracking Dogs Hunt for Clues

BURNABY (CP) — Police in Burnaby were using tracking dogs today to search the snow for clues in the murder of a woman whose body was found outside a restaurant here.

The woman, about 30, was believed to have been dumped from a car sometime during the night.

Policeman Shot; Teenager Tarred

BELFAST (Reuter) — A British army doctor attended today to a 17-year-old youth who was tarred and feathered and tied to a swing in a children's playground.

The youth received medical attention after freeing himself and staggering to a nearby army post, a military spokesman said. Tarring and feathering is used by the outlawed Irish Republican Army to punish criminal offenders, but the reason for its use in this case was not immediately clear.

A policeman was hit in the arm by one of six shots fired at a patrol car 15 miles south of Londonderry in Strabane, and 35 miles farther south bombs damaged an electricity transformer and a cattle yard at Enniskillen near the border.

But the real focus of interest today was what appeared to be the collapse of a planned British Broadcasting Corp. television special on solutions for the Ulster crisis, under pressure from the British and Ulster governments and a campaign against it by the London Daily Telegraph.

Eight of Britain's nine national daily newspapers front-paged the story and three—The Sun, The Guardian and The Times—commented on it editorially.

The program originally was planned to run for about two hours live next Wednesday with appearances by representatives of the Irish Republic government, the Belfast government and a spectrum of unofficial opinion including Rev. Ian Paisley and Bernadette Devlin.

London refused to take part and Paisley dropped out Tuesday night, saying: "I accepted the invitation to take part on the understanding that the Stormont (Northern Ireland) government would be repre-

Russia Sending Help to Dacca

DACCA (UPI) — The Soviet Union and the newly-proclaimed Peoples Republic of Bangla Desh announced plans today to draw up a trade treaty and begin arrangements for Russian engineers and technicians to help rebuild shattered East Pakistan.

The plans to draw up the trade pact "as quickly as possible" were announced after talks between Soviet trade mission chief V. V. Zvreb and Finance Minister M. Mansoor Ali and Home Minister A. H. Kamaruzzaman.

The Bangla Desh government said it needed cotton and electrical equipment as well as cash and technical advice to rebuild agricultural and industrial production which Ali said was "threadbare."

India and Bhutan are the only nations thus far to recognize the state of Bangla Desh but the Soviet actions indicated Russian recognition would be forthcoming shortly.

BRING IN EXPERTS

The minister said "special arrangements" were being made to bring in Soviet experts and their families to resume work on projects started before the war, and help in economic development.

Zvreb said the Soviet Union could supply cotton for the Bangla Desh textile mills and was drafting a proposal for reconstruction of the jute industry, the country's biggest foreign exchange earner.

Zvreb invited Ali to visit Moscow for financial and trade talks at an unspecified date in the future.

The first train from India to reach East Pakistan since the 1965 India-Pakistan war has arrived in Jessore to help with the repatriation of refugees.

STARVATION

It is reported from Narayanganj in East Pakistan that at least 30,000 non-Bengalis face death by starvation or at the hands of vengeance-seeking Bengalis. They are huddled in squalid ghettos inside the world's biggest jute mill at the town 14 miles from Dacca, protected by 400 Indian soldiers.

Indian officials said in New Delhi they believed a fight which broke the cease-fire along the western front of India and Pakistan Tuesday was an isolated incident and didt not indicate an immediate resumption of the war.

Shut Up, Get Dressed and Don't Touch

One Man's Formula For Staying Sane

PHILADELPHIA (Reuter) — Insensitivity to the world around him is the only way a sane man can cope with modern civilization, a Canadian psychologist says.

The argument for insensitivity is so great, says Dr. Lawrence La Fave of the University of Windsor, Ont., that he does not understand why sensitivity training through nude encounter groups has become a fad. He recommends insensitivity training through nudeless groups.

The psychologist running the group should be insensitive enough to get as many persons as possible in the group and clip them enormous amounts of money. That way the psychologist can set a good example.

The need for insensitivity is obvious, La Fave reports.

"Consider the merchant," he said in a paper delivered Monday to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

In order to "succeed in our sick, status-seeking, rat-racing society, he must be sufficiently insensitive to foreclose the mortgage on that poverty-stricken widow with 10 kids. The ladder of success is fashioned on human bodies."

"It is common knowledge that a surgeon should not operate on his wife. He's too nervous or emotionally sensitive to do a good job. . . ."

"A successful Bowery bum does not permit sensitivity to the condescending stares of passersby to prevent his hand from reaching out."

Athletes must be insensitive to pain to succeed. Prostitutes never become sensitive enough to give it away for free, La Fave said.

The answer is a desensitivity program. One must start with desensitivity to one's own hypocrisy, the psychologist said.

Desensitivity group sessions would help, but everyone in the session should be nudeless. Nudeness leads to sensitivity.

Instead of trying to get to know each other better, persons at such sessions would be given ear muffs and nose plugs and "are instructed not to taste or touch each other and to shut up."

La Fave's paper was delivered in a symposium on humor in science.

MORE THAN A CENTURY after it first opened, the old St. Ann's Academy Pioneer Schoolhouse is being readied for a move to a new location and a new era. Whitbread Shuts Well-Baby Clinic

Esquimalt's well-baby clinic, after 25 years of operation, was closed down a month ago by Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, chief medical officer of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health, Mayor Arthur Young revealed today.

Young said this is the main reason why Esquimalt is refusing to pay its share of the cost of hiring a children's speech therapist for the board.

Young said that the well-baby clinic (on infant health service), located in Esquimalt United Church, was closed because the board's staff considered facilities of "not high enough calibre."

NO COMPLAINTS

"But we have not had one complaint from the people who pay for it," the mayor said.

He said that it was strange that this action would take place after 25 years of operation and added that it was because Whitbread is trying to force Esquimalt to build a health centre for such activities.

A public health centre "is not absolutely necessary" although it would be an improvement, Young said.

He noted that the United Church facilities, which have been used for the past three or four years, are much superior than what was used before.

FACILITIES LACKING

Whitbread has also informed Esquimalt that the speech therapist could not work in that municipality because of a lack of facilities, Young said.

The mayor has written "a very hard letter" to the board asking it to reconsider the closure.

While Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay parents have their own well-baby clinics, Esquimalt parents now will have to go to health centre in Victoria to have their babies checked.

"There is no reason why such facilities should not be available in our own area."

Heart Attack Kills Ex-Reeve Murphy

He was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital after a heart attack at his home, 5092 Jennings Lane, and died within an hour.

Family funeral services will be held Friday at 10:15 a.m. in McCall Brothers funeral chapel, 1400 Vancouver. Bishop D. A. G. Rankilor will officiate.

Murphy was elected reeve of Saanich in December, 1961, and served until mid-1964 when he resigned to take a teaching post in Rhodesia. He was a councillor for four years before his election as reeve.

During his years on Saanich council, he supported some form of metropolitan government for the inner municipalities and advocated planning for development within Saanich as it moved rapidly from rural to urban environment in many parts.

He is survived by three sons, William Richard, Sean and Kevin Andrew, two daughters, Carol Anne and Thirell Corinne; two brothers, Archie William of Sidney and J. Alfred of Crofton; two sisters, Mrs. J. (Rosina) Tubman of Victoria and Mrs. Fred (Pat) Rudd of Sooke.

Fire Department Dispute Spawns N. Saanich Force

Beginning Saturday, Jan. 1, North Saanich will have its own fire protection service, a Sidney alderman predicted Tuesday.

Ald. Hugh Hollingworth was commenting on progress in working out details of the agreement which will dissolve the jointly-administered volunteer fire department of Sidney and North Saanich.

ACTION AVERTED

The last-minute settlement was reached by the two municipalities late in November. It averted the necessity for Supreme Court action on the long-standing dispute over administration, scheduled for December.

Hollingworth said territorial limits for operation of the new Deep Cove fire station have still to be completed.

"But when their alarm rings," added the alderman, "Sidney will be their backup so there is no great urgency."

Hollingworth is chairman of the Sidney firewardens committee, which includes Mayor Stan Dear, Ald Fred Robinson and firemen Ted Clarke and Fred Musclow.

This committee will sit down to work out an ambulance contract to serve Sidney and North Saanich shortly, promises Hollingworth. Under terms of the new agreement North Saanich will share total costs of the ambulance service provided by Sidney volunteers on a per capita basis.

APPRAISAL

An independent appraiser has now been appointed by the two municipalities to evaluate equipment and firehall property.

Hollingworth emphasized that historical items and furnishings in the firehall belonging to the firemen's association will not be included in the appraisal. These are items such as kitchen and recreation equipment which have been provided by the men themselves.

Appraised value of the firehall is to be divided equally between Sidney and North Saanich. Value of the equipment will be shared on a 60-40 basis, Sidney taking the smaller percentage.

Under the agreement the firehall site is the property of Sidney and the adjoining parking lot will be purchased from North Saanich by Sidney for $4,000.

Hollingworth commented that in contrast to past difficulties "there is now a very good feeling and co-operative attitude between Sidney and North Saanich."

sented. As this is now not so, I must reluctantly decline to take part."

"Perhaps the real fear of the government is its recognition that it has not a spokesman of the calibre to sustain its own case," the spokesman for militant Protestantism added.

The BBC issued a statement denying reports that Premier Brian Faulkner had asked it to end the program.

"If, however, it be true that the Stormont government is now unwilling to co-operate," the BBC said, "then the program cannot proceed in the form planned for Jan. 5 and fresh thought will have to be given to its preparation for a later showing."

The Times and The Guardian urged that the program be shown, while the tabloid Sun took the opposite view.

YEAR TO CLOSE WITH FIREWORKS

B.C.'s Centennial '71 Year will end on New Year's eve with a fireworks display over the Inner Harbor, a Chinese dragon dance, a carillon concert and singing.

The dragon will dance in Heritage Square beside the Provincial Museum at 11:30 p.m.

It takes two dancers to manipulate the dragon.

Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson will be guest at the ceremonies in the square featuring the burial of a time capsule to be opened at the 200th anniversary of B.C.'s entry into Confederation, July 20, 2071.

The carillon bells, donated by The Netherlands community of B.C., will be played by Herman Bergink, and the Newcombe Glee Club, a provincial civil servants' club, will sing.

Chief Jimmie Sewid of Alert Bay, chief of the B.C. Native Indian subcommittee, will be a special guest.

Coroner Plea to Kids: Don't Slide on Streets

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — A coroner investigating the lower mainland's first toboggan death of the winter, appealed to children Tuesday to keep toboggans and sleighs off city streets.

"I can't over-emphasize the danger of sleighing on hilly streets anywhere in the lower mainland," said coroner Doug Jack.

Jack said he has not decided whether to hold an inquest into the death of 10-year-old Christopher Iwata, whose toboggan slid into a truck Monday night in Burnaby.

His brother, Carey, 7, was in satisfactory condition in hospital with injuries suffered in the same accident. Another boy jumped clear of the toboggan before the collision.

Over Snow Budget

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The district of North Vancouver already is dipping into next year's snow removal budget, municipal manager Doug Welsh told council Tuesday night. The district allowed $160,000 for snow removal, but already has spent $221,000.

Negligence Ruled

MASSET (CP) — A coroner's jury in this community on the Queen Charlotte Islands has ruled that both the parents and a babysitter showed nelect in their actions preceding a fire Dec. 19 in the nearby village of Haida in which five children died.

The jury made its findings after an inquest into the deaths of Karen Leona, 9, Eileen Dorothy, 5, Vincent Roderick, 1, and two seven-year-olds, Gilbert Clifford and Peter Charles Bell.

The jury said the babysitter showed neglect by not advising a responsible person that he was leaving the children unattended.

It said the parents showed neglect by leaving the youngsters in the charge of a babysitter for a period of some 15 hours without determining that their well-being was being attended to.

$27,000 Taken

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three armed men wearing wigs got away with $27,000 Tuesday in a holdup at a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada.

Bakery shop owner Nick Stolp, who walked into the middle of it, said he was just handing over his $419 deposit when the robbers took it.

He said he saw one man come out of the vault with a gun at the bank manager's back.

"The man said he wanted more $20 bills and the manager replied: "Look for yourself, there aren't any more," said Stolp.

A car, believed to have been used in the getaway, was later found abandoned in a nearby lane.

Search Resumes

FERNIE (CP) — The search was to resume today for three men believed buried in a snow slide about 30 miles southeast of here.

Missing are Ralph King of Pincher Creek, Alta., and two Cranbrook men, Willy Pearson and Darryl Bennett.

They left a remote logging camp in the area Thursday morning with a bulldozer and two other vehicles in an effort to clear a snowslide which was blocking the Flathead Pass and their route to home where they wanted to spend Christmas.

It is believed they were caught by a second slide.

PLUGGED IN to the right "plug" B.C. Telephone worker Kenneth Johnson, his wife, Sheila, and children Brett, 4, and Karen, 5, are all smiles as they discuss what to do with $127,000 won when a seven-year-old horse, Kelanne, won the Irish Sweep Hurdle. Johnson's nom-de-plume was My Turn. Asked whether he thought he would win, the North Vancouverite replied: "I like to think positive."

Purse Snatcher Takes Woman's Sweep Ticket

Times News Service

NEW YORK — Holda Johannson, 66, cried Tuesday when told that her Irish sweepstakes ticket had won $52,000. Her purse containing that ticket had been snatched a month ago by a young thief as she walked down a Manhattan street.

But the Brooklyn widow's story may have a happy ending. The seller of the ticket said he still has the receipt and Mrs. Johannson will get the money if she can provide positive identification.

"I am nothing right now," Mrs. Johannson said. "I feel like I'm half dead. I want to use the money to visit my sister, Sigrid, who is dying now in Sweden. I haven't seen her in 10 years.

"I can't believe it. But I don't have the money yet, so how can I make plans?"

Mrs. Johannson has been sent sweepstakes tickets for several years by her daughter who buys them from a co-worker, William Iadonisi. Iadonisi, who as the seller will receive some money too, said Mrs. Johannson must prove her identity and have a form from Ireland notarized to get the money.

In Matgami, Que., the whereabouts of a man who won $50,000 in the Irish remained a mystery today as community officials denied any knowledge of him.

A ticket bearing the name Chester Schmura of Matagami, Que., entitles the holder to $50,000 second-place prize money for Tuesday's running of the Irish Sweeps Hurdle at Leopardstown, Ireland.

"Nobody around here knows him," Paul Martineau. town manager of the community 350 miles north of Montreal said in an interview.

Police sergeant Paul Moreau said the man "may have been just passing through and given this as his town."

"Matagami has a population of about 3,500 but there is a constantly mobile population of about 1,500 on their way to and from James Bay. He might have been one of these."

In Chicago Mrs. Otto Svoboda at first didn't believe that she had won $130,000. Then the U.S. government stepped in.

"I couldn't believe it. But now when they tell me how much the government will take I'm beginning to believe," said Mrs. Svoboda Tuesday after learning that she was a winner.

Mrs. Svoboda, 52, said she and her husband — who bought the ticket — have decided to help one of their daughters buy a house and give some money to the other daughter.

The family had been buying sweepstakes tickets for 20 years, Mrs. Svoboda said.

"We never expected it," she said. "I'm still so dazed and so shocked.

"I guess you believe anything after a while. But isn't this wonderful? Whatever amount is left is good. You should be thankful for what you win, no?"

Housing Record Likely

By BUD JORGENSEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Housing construction is expected to be one of the few plus factors for the Canadian economy during 1972.

Projections are for 1971 to be a record year for housing starts—the beginning of construction of residential units—and many people in the industry believe 1972 will be even better.

Senior business executives speaking at a forum on the outlook for 1972 sponsored by the University of Toronto 's business school saw many potential problems for the economy but there was agreement that residential construction activity would be healthy.

Robert C. T. Stewart of Halifax, president of the Canadian Construction Association, said the industry goal of 220,000 housing starts probably will be exceeded by between 10,000 and 15,000 units. A projection of 235,000 starts for 1971 is a commonly accepted figure.

Morgan Reid, vice-president of Simpsons-Sears Ltd., said the high rate of housing starts "spilled over into a strong demand for consumer durables—furniture, color television, appliances, etc."

Other speakers noted the stimulating effect on the economy of demand for materials to build and equip a house or apartment.

The federal government has intervened to bolster the residential construction industry by making loan money available.

The Economic Council of Canada has recommended that governments support the industry to ensure a steady flow of new construction, thus stabilizing supply and demand for labor and materials. It appears that the advice is being followed.

The council has estimated that Canadians will need 1.25-million new residestial units during the six-year period beginning in 1969.

The projection of 235,000 starts for this year compares with 190,500 in 1970 and 210,400 in 1969, a record year for the industry. The industry would need about 205,000 starts a year for the last half of that six-year period to meet the Economic Council goal.

Harold G. Shipp of Mississauga, Ont., president of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, says he believes the industry will top the goal by a substantial amount.

"I believe we are capable of producing some 240,000 housing starts as a residential construction industry in 1972 and I would further predict that in the year 1973, barring anything unforeseen coming on the economic scene, we can do 260,000 starts," he said in a statement.

The 1973 forecast appears feasible, he said, because production since 1968 has increased by an average of 6.3 per cent annually.

The govrenment during 1971 actively pursued a policy designed to lower interest rates and by year-end the prime residential mortgage rate was down to 8¾ per cent in some areas. The prime rate—the rate for the most creditworthy borrowers—has declined steadily since mid-1970, when it was 10¼ per cent.

YAHYA KHAN SAID UNDER ARREST

By The Associated Press

A Pakistani newspaper reported today that former president Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan is under house arrest and will remain under detention during an inquiry into his wartime leadership.

The Daily News Times said Yahya, who dropped from sight when Zulfikar Ali Bhutto replaced him as president, has continued to live in the presidential residence since his resignation last week. The report said he would be moved to a private residence in Rawalpindi.

Several political and military leaders have demanded that Yahya be brought to trial for the loss of East Pakistan to India. Bhutto responded by naming a commission to conduct an investigation of the war.

HIS MEMORY'S GREAT EXCEPT ON BIRTHDAYS

There was a time when a much younger August Jack didn't bother having a birthday, because he didn't know when he was born.

But now, at 107 years of age (or is it 108?), Jack likes birthdays so much he has two a year — much to the annoyance of his 53-year-old daughter, Mrs. George Cooper of 1490 Admirals, Victoria.

Jack, who lives in Westholme, celebrated his 108th birthday on Tuesday because he says he was born on Dec. 28, 1864 on a reserve at Lummi, near Bellingham, Wash.

Mrs. Cooper, backed by a lot of research, contends he was born on May 27, 1865.

"He's just becoming a laughing stock," Mrs. Jack said today. "I was annoyed when he had two birthdays last year and I had meant to correct it then."

She said Jack got the idea he was born on Dec. 28 when, in 1958, when he was about 94, he was told such by the Indian office in Everett, Wash. where he had gone over the matter of his late mother's estate.

However, at the time he was 100, Mrs. Molly Robinson of Duncan wrote "all over the U.S." for months to substantiate his birthday, and, finally, from records in a Catholic rectory in Pully, Wash. proved the date to be May 27, 1865.

Mrs. Cooper said that it was on the basis of this research that a big dinner was held for Jack in May on his 101st birthday.

BIRTHDAY

"He already knows his birthday is in May, but people keep going to him in December." She added she was going to have another talk with him over this matter.

Jack is remarkable for his age, whatever it is. He's "quite spry" and has "a very good memory" probably because he worked 60 years at longshoring before retiring at 86, Mrs. Cooper said.

"Last night he was on television shovelling snow, which is something I couldn't even do now."

Haynes Attacks 'Double Standard'

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson was accused today of adopting a double standard following his decision that no charges will be laid against police officers as a result of the Gastown disturbances in Vancouver last August.

Ray Haynes, secretary of the B.C. Federadion of Labor, said in a press release the attorney-general is adopting "one set of legal procedures for ordinary citizens and a special, easier, set of procedures for police officers.

"This double standard can only destroy confidence in the supposed impartiality and equality of our judicial process. Young people particularly can hardly be expected to respect a process which grants special privileges to one section of the community while rigorously enforcing the law against other sections."

Peterson said last week the decision not to lay charges against policemen was made after a review of evidence surrounding allegations of assault against policemen.

Mr. Justice Thomas Dohm of the B.C. Supreme Court, who conducted an inquiry, and officials within the attorney-general's department agreed with the decision not to lay charges, said Peterson.

Peterson denied that Vancouver prosecutor Stewart McMorran had recommended laying of charges. The Vancouver police commission recommended that charges be laid and McMorran was quoted as saying sufficient evidence existed.

Mr. Justice Dohm, in his report, found that unwarranted and excessive force was used by some policemen as a result of misinformation about the amount of property damage being done in the disturbance.

Gathering Up the Pieces

The savagery of the first few post-war days in East Pakistan is giving way to the dreary aftermath of war — the dispatch of prisoners to camps, the ragged return of refugees, and the settlement talks which, had they taken place earlier, might well have prevented the conflict.

What apparently will be a series of discussions between Pakistan's new President Bhutto and Sheik Rahman, is under way but terse reports of the first encounter indicate little progress. That is understandable, since Sheik Rahman is a prisoner of the president even though his leadership was the result of a general election and has been confirmed by a war won by his supporters with Indian aid. It has been claimed that East Pakistan would return to peace and order within two hours of its leader's return. But Indian military sources believe that it will be necessary to do some hard trading with West Pakistan before this is possible. Among the pawns in the game are nearly 100,000 Pakistani soldiers who were taken prisoner and who are threatened with war crimes trials and possible death if Sheik Rahman and numerous Bengalis are not returned freely to East Pakistan.

The situation has left Western countries, indeed the whole UN, sitting on the sidelines. Only India so far has extended diplomatic recognition to the proclaimed new nation of Bangla Desh. The latter's future is so problematical that it might still be possible for West Pakistan to retain some association with the Eastern wing in return for a new deal in self-government. But the larger forces in the background make any simple solution unlikely. India wants its traditional enemy Pakistan dismembered, Russia will find advantage in a friendly — and indebted — people directly south of China, while China may be loath to lose the diplomatic gains it has made in the past few months by staging any direct military adventure.

But meanwhile the pawns — the military prisoners and the almost equally captive refugees — wait to hear their fate. A tempting latter-day precedent has been set for many a country with ambitions to try a sudden military gamble. World peace has been weakened by the two-week war and every country is a little less safe.

Same Partners But a New Relationship

It is hard to believe that the old relationship between the United States and Great Britain has altered dramatically but as results of the recent Anglo-American summit in Bermuda show, it has apparently done so.

There Mr. Nixon revealed, in a somewhat breathless way, that the two greatest English-speaking powers must attend increasingly to their own separate affairs: "On the great issues, we see the problems of the world in exactly the same way. As Britain goes into Europe, there will be a new Europe. The United States is at present embarking on creating what is really a new America. And we do live in a time when, because of the vast changing events of the world, we live in a new world." A new Europe, a new America, a new world — these are the colossal considerations which will from now on occupy Anglo-American relations.

Old landmarks like the Atlantic alliance will remain and there was general agreement on steps to bring harmony to international finance and "more liberal commercial exchanges." However, persistent problems result from the president's intention to visit China, his abrupt economic moves and his blaming of India in the recent war on the subcontinent.

Tensions were always present, even in the heyday of the "special relationship." What has changed is the new orientation — towards the future and the unknown rather than across the North Atlantic and its profitable trade routes. A relationship as old as the Jamestown settlement of 1607 has taken an unpredictable turn. Countries like Canada which are associated by ties of culture, commerce and alliances to these powers will be profoundly affected by the changes in the Anglo-American world.

Sue the Teacher

A California education consultant has told a teachers' workshop at the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology that no teacher has the right to fail a student and that the student should have the right to sue the teacher.

The suit would be initiated for "educational malpractice" says the educator, who holds that a failing grade for a student in fact means that the course has failed him.

This seems one more addition to the collection of merry nonsense talked by some educators in current times. But it ignores an important corollary — the right of the teacher to counter-claim against the petitioning student if the latter loses his action.

In addition to implying "educational malpractice", launching by students of such suits would imply incompetence on the teacher's part so injurious that it could cost him or her the means of livelihood. Hence the desirability of extending to the pedagogue the right to counter-claim, buttressed by the court's requirement that the student should put up surety guaranteeing payment of damages in the event of his own failure before the judge.

Thin Paper on NATO's Cracks

BRUSSELS — This year's annual meeting of NATO foreign and defence ministers went off the rails before it even began. In the developing international scheme of things it had been intended to begin official preparations for a conference on European security and co-operation.

The basic condition for moving closer to negotiations with the Soviet Union set by NATO itself last spring, "successful completion of the Berlin agreements," was not realized. And NATO's own initiative of sending former Secretary-General Manlio Brosio to Moscow to sound out the Soviets on force reductions failed to win the necessary invitation from the Kremlin.

In a word, as both Defence Minister Donald Macdonald and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp acknowledged, the mood was disappointment. In the long run NATO may be better off because one of its annual exercises in public relations failed to come off properly. Every year the meeting has been preceded by predictable posturing in key capitals, East and West. A horde of journalists flock to Brussels to sit outside a closed meeting with ears to the ground, as it were, waiting to tell the world that NATO is strong and united but searching diligently for detente.

Realistic Assessments

That is the official message again this year. But the attempt to put it over failed rather obviously. The strength and the unity may be there but the cracks are papered over very thinly. As a result of circumstances, like the disarray in the West over fundamental monetary, economic and defence questions and the enigmas of Soviet policies, ministers have been forced to be more realistic in their assessments.

Last December Mr. Sharp could express unchallenged his belief that it was possible "to have the same degree of security at a lower level of the confrontation." He could call on the Soviets to give NATO evidence of their good faith. He could say "unquestionably the key issue is Berlin."

That is what he said in different words this year, addding only "disappointment that events have not moved as quickly as we would have hoped." During the year Canadian policy appears to have changed emphasis slightly.

One of several divisions among member countries that could not be papered over was the pace at which NATO should proceed to a security conference. Mr. Sharp associated himself solidly with the prevailing West German, American and British views that conditions for moving on to negotiations "have not been met in any sense."

With U.S. support, West German Foreign Minister Walter Scheel came to Brussels convinced that NATO could move no farther until the Berlin agreements had been signed by the four powers and ratified in the West German Parliament.

France, supported by Denmark and Norway, was prepared to accept the good faith already demonstrated by the Soviet Union and to agree, here and now, to begin preparatory work officially by accepting an invitation from Finland to that effect, thus revealing yet another division. The "agreement" three weeks ago between French Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann and British Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home was illusory. Britain and France did not agree after all.

Far more interesting and unpredictable was Mr. Sharp's position. All one can say is that last year he was clearly identified in everything he said publicly here with the Scandinavians, who were more detentish than the British, U.S. or West Germans. This year he voiced essentially the same sentiments about belief in the feasibility of detente but he lined up with the other side. Perhaps he is more pragmatic or realistic than the Danes and Norwegians.

Mainly Criticism

Mr. Macdonald presented a much more positive picture this year. Last year his main point in public was in criticism of NATO's report on defence strategy for the coming decade. It was too narrowly focused on the immediate future, not sufficiently on the later part of the decade.

He too was disappointed this year, that Moscow had failed to invite Mr. Brosio for the exploratory talks on Mutual and Balanced Force Reductions (MBFR). Asked about the long-range future of NATO, he replied:

"I wouldn't hold my breath waiting for it to dissolve."

And what of the Canadian 5,000-man contribution in Europe? It was near to the point of "irreducible minimum" and would remain so for the most of the present decade Mr. Macdonald said.

The Americans flew in, protesting loudly their commitment to Europe, which events later proved to be more words than action. Mr. Sharp declined an invitation to offer a similar statement of Canadian interest. He merely reiterated what he had said before, in a manner more usual, less forthcoming, than Mr. Macdonald's statement, that there were no plans to reduce further the Canadian commitment.

Parliamentarians Necessary?

TORONTO — Every so often the Ontario Legislature wonders aloud about what the Ontario Legislature is supposed to do. Like parliaments everywhere, it has an identity problem: as government expands and the executive branch of the system becomes ever more powerful, the legislative branch finds its role being steadily reduced to that of a rubber stamp. Are, therefore, parliamentarians really necessary?

The legal and political answer, of course, is obviously yes, since new legislation cannot become law without parliamentary approval and since the presence of a legislature makes governments seem a lot less autocratic than they really are. It is good PR to have a parliament.

But beyond these fundamentals, it is becoming increasingly difficult to find a parliamentary reason for existence. I say increasingly difficult because time is no longer available to permit governments to make more than a superficial bow to the parliamentary process.

Limited Role

Given the fact that parliaments are controlled by governments, the parliamentary role is an extremely limited one under the best of circumstances. Supposedly, it is to examine government performance and program, and suggest alternatives. But the time it gets to do this is pretty much decided by the government and there are a thousand and one ways in which a government can defeat the spirit if not the letter of a decent parliamentary inspection.

With the growth of big government, the pressures on the executive to do just this are almost irresistible. Even with longer and longer parliamentary sessions, there is just not enough time in a year for a government to get through its estimates, its housekeeping legislation, its amendments to present law and its new programs without cutting down on parliamentary debate, either openly by closure or, as is generally the method, by working the parliamentary rules to government advantage.

Realists may shrug "So what?" Since the government rarely pays any attention to parliamentary debate anyway and since the opposition parties can as easily make their points directly to the press and TV cameras, what does it matter if parliament is only a rubber stamp?

It matters in at least three ways. One is that modern legislation is often so complicated that its real effect may not be understood, even by the government, unless there is adequate scrutiny and debate. The second is that governments do listen, almost against their will, to what parliaments have to say; they may pretend not to, or argue against it, but some of its gets through to condition the government's future action and perhaps even reappear, much latter, as a government program.

ROBERT NIXON
improve the role . . .

And the third and most important way it matters is that a rubber stamp parliament is a contradiction in terms. It produces, very quickly, rubber stamp parliamentarians — party hacks who are uninterested and incapable of representing the citizens who elect them. It discourages and drives away the better people.

One of the better ones, for example, is Ian Deans, the NDP Member of the Legislature for Wentworth. He is young, energetic, a good speaker with a brain in his head. He was first elected in 1967 and he recently told the legislature:

"I always thought in my naive way before I got here that we had citizen contribution to public decision making . . . that part of the way this contribution was made was through the efforts of the Members of the Legislature — that, historically and traditionally the Members of the Legislature brought before the government the complaints, suggestions, offerings of the people whom they represented for consideration and that consideration was given by the government to those kinds of things . . .

"Well, I discovered in the four years that this is not the way it works . . . If you are not in the cabinet all your functions cease and you end up sitting somewhere out here not knowing what the government is doing, not being consulted about the government's action, and in fact playing even a lesser role than the Opposition does.

"Then what is the function, what is the purpose of coming here at all? Why don't you simply deal by virtue of the cabinet, send out the decisions that you have arrived at and continue on your merry way, because that is exactly what happens."

Robert Nixon, the Opposition Leader, is one of the better parliamentarians, with 10 years experience. There is a growing feeling, he told the government, that the Legislature "simply exists to respond to the ringing of the bells and to vote as directed. There has got to be some way to improve the role of the elected Member."

Accountability Eroded

Glen Hodgson, one of the better Conservative back-benchers with eight years experience, said there has been a growing erosion in the accountability of the government to the legislature. "I am not a member of the government party as I see my position in this House," he said. "I am a supporter of the executive and it is with my support and the support of a majority of members that the executive holds office."

The occasion of these remarks was the passage, within a few hours, of three bills to streamline the executive branch of the government by reorganizing the cabinet and authorizing the appointment of three "super" ministers to co-ordinate government policies and programs. The legislation was recommended by a task force on government productivity whose terms of reference, characteristically and deliberately, did not include any mention of the role of the Legislature.

But Premier Davis said the Members should not despair. The government was concerned about their role and anxious to make the Legislature "a meaningful situation" for them. It would have some thoughts to propose in that regard — next spring.

FROM OUR READERS

Near Miss

There is no safe pedestrian crossing on Cook Street between Fort and Fairfield.

Dangerous in daylight, it is suicidal after dark. Having cleared the light at either end, Cook Street becomes a speedway.

It is my habit to wait, no matter how long, until the crossing is safe. This I did one Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, when about three-quarters of the way across I heard brakes, and a light colored car (small) swerved around me in the crosswalk. It was a near miss.

I was not entirely faultless, having forgotten, until on the street, my rule of wearing a white coat at night.

It is only by a slight margin that I am able today to say "Happy New Year."—Learning.

Mink Hat Facts

With regards to your editorial of Dec. 22 concerning mink hats for servicewomen, on first reading it would appear that the Department of National Defence bought 6,000 of these hats to outfit about 1,200 women.

To set the record straight, what is not generally known is that the enrolment ceiling for servicewomen has recently been lifted. Armed forces personnel planners anticipate the number of female members will rise to about 3,000 in 1972.

Also, it is normal purchasing practice to buy spares whether they be aircraft parts, machinery, uniforms, hats or what have you. So, about 3,000 hats have been shelved to meet supply demands over the next three years.

Like servicemen, servicewomen are issued one complete uniform kit on enrolment at no cost to the individual. After that uniform upkeep, including hats, becomes a personal responsiblity and an out-of-pocket expense to force members.

These mink hats were made from pelt tails, a part of the mink not generally used by milliners, at a cost of about $15 each. This compares favourably to the cost of servicemen's peaked hats which range from $8 to $28 each, depending on type and quality. — V. J. Keating, Major, Regional Information Officer.

Generosity

This year, through the continuing generosity of the householders of Victoria, the Halloween collection for Unicef totalled $2,427.42, considerably more than the 1970 total.

We are deeply grateful not only to the children who so willingly shared their Halloween with others around the world but also to the principals and staff of the co-operating schools, the Bank of Montreal, The Royal Bank of Canada, the various news media, the general public and everyone else who helped in any way.

On behalf of Unicef, may I offer Season's Greetings to all who care for needy children throughout the world.—Mrs. L. G. Toms, Victoria Halloween Chairman, 2501 Central Avenue.

A Time to Face Honestly Facts of the Drug Age

By ROMAIN GARY
Le Monde

Here it is "permissiveness' which is to blame and the call goes out to exercise greater authority on youth. There it is the "rotten, capitalist society" where only overthrow will bring order.

Words like "comprehension," "repression," and "dissuasion" are bandied about with smugness: a lot of hot air providing plenty of lift to clear the hazards on the ground. And the contradictions are countless.

Socio-romantic analysis characteristic of the early nineteenth century "mal du siecle" tends to create a drug mystique, an aura of self-destruction not unlike that which surrounded the "visionary poets," the whole with majestic overtones of social protest.

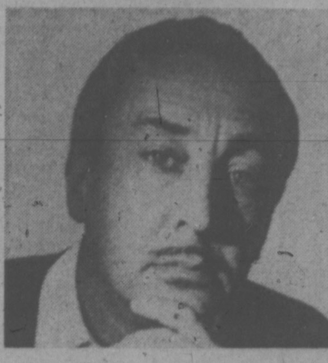
Despair Pays

It is a kind of analysis which lays the entire blame for drugs at society's door. The povery-stricken romanticism of such "justification" can only create an atmosphere conducive to spreading, the disease yet further. Heroin would be enough to turn anybody into a terribly interesting rebel. Despair always pays if you want to go wrapped in a dark, boding beauty.

I have in the course of the last 15 years met hundreds of young addicts. It was in California that I saw LSD make the drug scene.

I can state here quite frankly that some schools of psychiatry bear a heavy responsibility for spreading this poison. There were, in fact, many doctors in the mid-50s who believed in the therapeutic value of LSD. They wrote papers claiming that the drug enabled incredibly thorough analyses to be made leading to "cures" in a few short weeks.

The world is well aware of the consequences of these chimeric hopes. I knew Aldous Huxley when he began experimenting with hallucinogens which, people used to say in that epoch, opened whole new worlds to creative people. In fact, for Huxley and many others, it was the end of all creative activity.



FRENCH writer Romain Gary is the author of Roots of Heaven and other novels.

I have seen 17- and 18-year-old girls exploited sexually after having been deliberately induced to take morphine or cocaine. Chicago gangsters used to get young women hooked on heroin before turning them to prostitution.

To speak of "social revolt" in such a context is tantamount to an exploitation of human misery for ideological, not to say demagogical, ends.

Seven of the 10 cases which I have personally followed began with a premeditated use of drugs where one person intended to subjugate another in an "erotic" — homosexual or heterosexual — context.

Here the mentor's perverseness plays a decisive role. Then there is also the addict's psychic aberration which makes him want to be surrounded by others reduced to the same state as himself so that he may feel less isolated in his vice. This is one of the main reasons for the proselytism in this area.

An analogous motivation had been noted earlier by those who chronicled the behavior of syphilitics. They often discovered among some patients a deliberate desire to infect as many of their partners as possible. When a drug addict contaminates a friend by getting him hooked, he is trying to escape not a "hostile society," but the loneliness of his own addiction.

Social and domestic conditions obviously complicate the situation. I have known addicts and prostitutes who deliberately set out to destroy themselves in order to punish their fathers or their mothers.

What is indeed curious is that some condemn the family as a "bourgeois, retrograde institution" while at the same time explaining the recourse to drugs as the result of a decline of the father's role in the family.

Arguing in this vein, the psycho-sociologists call for an end to paternal authority, which in their view is responsible for so many traumas, but at the same time they attribute addiction to a decline of the same authority.

Strange logic. Any means is good for utilizing addicts to promote ideologies, either of the Right or the Left.

Lack of character isn't something for which society can be blamed. Admittedly there has been a renunciation of culture. But for how much longer are we going to keep on mouthing this nonsense about it being the "duty" of society to provide individuals with an ambition in life?

It is an attitude which smacks of totalitarianism and is patently a posthumous victory for fascism. For how much longer are we going to clamor for "freedom" and yet wax indignant that society is refusing to take charge of our souls, our hopes, our dreams, our happiness, and our options?

And youth, as far as I know, has never looked to governments for its ideals. A civilization may prepare men to make their choices and be chosen, but each of us is condemned to find his way by his own means.

The recourse to drugs is not unconnected with our civilization's materialistic malaise, but it is primarily linked to the population explosion.

Crushed Adolescents

So great is the number of people in this world, so stifling the demographic pressure, that each adolescent finding his feet in society feels himself diminished, crushed and depersonalized under the weight of numbers.

The phenomenon provides an explanation for the new "tribalism" of groups, the individual in search of an enlargement of himself through a transfer to the "group-individual." —

Under this weight of numbers, the individual loses his sense of values, of responsibility, of possibilities, and of dignity. Once this happens, anything goes, from drugs to murder.

But there is no point in trying to prove that these ills are endemic in any particular social system: during the delirium of the Cultural Revolution in China murderous mobs could be seen swarming through the streets.

During a recent television debate three members of the French government made it plain that they were not going to draw distinctions on drugs in the matter of sanctions. There was to be no difference in the suppression of heroin and marijuana, for example.

It seems to me that, given the direction in which our civilization is moving, they will have to change their viewpoint — and the sooner the better.

In fact there are all the indications that we are entering a period where chemicals will become a regular complement to existence — in short, the drug age.

As reasonable a man as Arthur Koestler is urging biochemists to work on breaking down the inherent dichotomy between our "two brains" operating in constant conflict.

Eurologists have discovered — or, as in the case of lithium, rediscovered — nerve-stabilizing agents that are remarkably effective against cyclothymic depressions, while there is already talk of using chemotherapy on defective genes.

The process is as irreversible as technology, and could be the initial stage of a salutory biological revolution. In view of this and more available evidence, insistence on tarring all drugs with the same brush amounts to a refusal to look the future squarely in the face.

Those who fall victim to dangerous drugs are the advance patrols lost in an exploratory expedition whose findings could turn out to be highly beneficial to humanity. Contrary to the dire Orwellian predictions in 1984, society is moving towards a far greater diversity in customs and ways of life.

The decline of the individual will increasingly promote the search for "common" experiences and drugs will surely play a certain role in such collective enterprises.

Civilization is developing into a multitude of micro-societies springing up within the production and distribution frameworks, where each cell, sect, clan, or fraternity attracts its members on the basis of specific but varying criteria pertaining to life-style, tastes, beliefs and customs.

A million and a half married couples in the United States indulge in group sex: subcultures of homosexuals, hippies, "Jesus freaks," and many others make up communities, some organizational, some ritual. Everywhere the urge to be different, to cast off imposed norms of behavior is manifest.

Get Traffickers

Among infra-societies, whether we like it or not, there will be communities, hopefully merely on the fringes, where a particular drug may take on the importance of the philosopher's stone.

Rather than launch a world-wide, punitive campaign against all drugs, responsible authorities might do well to concentrate on attacking the most dangerous — heroin, amphetamines, and LSD for a start — and devise scientific means of controlling them.

As for drug traffickers, they are vermin and the need for their eradication goes without saying, but they are a scourge distinct from the drug problem itself.

To speak in general terms, we are moving towards an age where the real world gives way increasingly to the unreal, whether it is in television, amusements, or culture, the concern with the universe beyond reality is now apparent in technologically advanced countries.

Aztec, Egyptian, or early Christian civilizations, enveloped in the wonder of myth, found their answer to the problem. For our materialistic, concrete civilization, the unreal will, in all its forms, become necessarily and increasingly a pervasive force.

A society cannot be materialistic without being simultaneously escapist. The passage into the unreal is as inevitable in "Marxist" civilizations as it is among the arch capitalists.

Rather than deny the evidence, it would be more fruitful to accept that we are over the threshold of an age of chemical metamorphoses where there is no way to predict the consequences.

It is an era we should confront courageously, without hypocrisy, though with some concern, since the course is towards the unknown, but without fear, as in the ultimate analysis everything will depend, yet again, on that eternal imponderable that has served us well on a number of previous occasions: the genius of man.

LOBBYIST R. Keith Stroup, a 27-year-old Washington, D.C., lawyer, is attempting to have marijuana legalized in the U.S. That's a plastic marijuana plant on his desk.

They got what they wanted . . . now how do we cope?

Abortion: Doctors on a Treadmill

THE MEDICAL POST
An Editorial

Since abortion was made legal in Canada, the life of the average obstetrician has changed traumatically. He is finding himself being drawn more and more onto a professional treadmill where there seems to be never-ending demands for therapeutic abortions.

In 1970, the first full year of legalized abortion, over 11,000 were performed in Canada, according to Statistics Canada, and there is every reason to believe that the figure for 1971 will be nearly double that of 1970.

The public has spoken, and therefore we have to face the fact that legalized abortion is to become a way of life. The resolutions on abortion passed by the Canadian Medical Association at its meeting in Halifax last June took a liberal and realistic stance on this complex problem.

But, in one respect the CMA did not go far enough. It made no official recognition of the dilemma in which the obstetricians and gynecologists find themselves, nor did it suggest, except in the broadest terms, a way that these physicians can get off the treadmill.

Somehow the idea seems to have gotten around, particularly among the unmarried teenage girls who are seeking abortions in ever-increasing numbers, that abortion is an alternative to contraception.

Girls Unprepared

When these girls are interviewed prior to abortion many of them admit that their contraceptive methods are sketchy, to say the least, in spite of an active sex life. Many of them are extremely vague about methods of contraception or take no trouble to provide themselves with contraceptives.

One gynecologist friend of ours who is on the abortion treadmill, not by choice, says he is getting tired of these young girls who look at him with tears in their eyes and exclaim: "Oh, doctor, we didn't think of taking any precautions. It just happened!"

To be fair about it, the CMA did say, in its brief on abortion to the federal government, that advice and information on family planning should be readily available, that advice on family planning should be the responsibility of the physicians of Canada and that this responsibility should be shared by "other educational health agencies."

The blueprint for reducing the number of abortions and putting the emphasis on family planning (where it belongs) has obviously been drawn up but there are still few signs that any building has started.

Monkey on Back

The physicians of this country cannot take on the entire burden of family planning education by themselves. Certainly more positive action should be forthcoming from the CMA to get this monkey off the backs of the profession but it cannot be expected to do the job by itself.

The public has been vociferous about legalized abortions and it is probably right in doing so. But now it is time for the CMA and our family planning organizations to put the situation squarely up to the federal government. We need a massive educational program that will reach right down through all strata of the population on the need and techniques of contraception.

Recently Sir Keith Joseph, head of Britain's social services and health, has announced a special $250,000 grant to that country's Family Planning Association to help educate the population about birth control "with a view to preventing unwanted pregnancies and thus cutting down on the number of abortions."

A similar co-ordinated program is needed here; a program which will be adequately financed and not left entirely to the voluntary organizations no matter how well-meaning these groups are.

Such a campaign should in time slow up the rate of increase of abortions or even reduce them. But no one can expect them to be eliminated.

Long Wait

The next move then would be to get the abortions out of the acute hospitals and into outpatient clinics, either affiliated with the hospitals or outside of hospital jurisdiction entirely.

Under the present system in Canada too much time is taken by the medical profession and the hospitals in deciding when the patient should be aborted. Dr. David Claman reported recently that 80 per cent of the women in Vancouver were now waiting more than three weeks between the decision to terminate and the operation itself.

Here again massive educational campaigns are necessary to persuade women who want an abortion to have it done before the 12th week. During this first trimester both the morbidity and mortality is almost nil as surveys in other countries have shown. But such campaigns will amount to very little if facilities and staff for these early abortions are not provided for in special clinics.

When legalized abortion was first discussed by physicians there was a general consensus that such operations should be done in hospitals.

A poll of medical staffs in general acute care hospitals on this subject today would reveal a desire to get these abortions out of the hospitals. They are literally swamping facilities and demoralizing the staffs, particularly the obstetrics and gynecology sections.

Special facilities should be set up and special staff assigned to these clinics. The obstetricians and gynecologists are bearing the brunt of this nasty business, and it is time their plight was understood and some measures of relief provided.

Children Have Rights too

By SIDNEY CALLAHAN

I made a suggestion recently at a national conference that each child should have a "child defender" or "child advocate."

Simply put, the idea is that each child should have someone who speaks for him and his rights, first and foremost, without any self-interest.

Each child who is born essentially helpless could then have an adult in addition to his parents who could be a source of support, protection and intervention in a crisis.

I came to this conclusion after meditating upon the rising incidence of child abuse. Many, many children are endangered by their distraught parents. Others are denied things that they badly need when they are rejected by their parents.

The case we were discussing at the conference was a case in which a retarded newborn was denied an operation he needed and allowed to die. That child needed a third party who was neither parent or parent's physician to speak for him and to defend his rights.

The physician in the case did not protect the child because he sincerely believed that babies belong to parents. But I think more of us sincerely believe that a child cannot be owned or disposed of like property.

Slaves and women are no longer owned or belong to masters, and it's time we established the fact legally and politically that children are not solely owned by their parents.

Nor, of course, do people belong to the government or state. Some of the outraged response I got to my suggestion of child advocates was from people who were assuming that I was falling into the fallacy of the totalitarian regimies who claim that babies belong to the state. Never.

Government for and by the people is all-important. But as a human species we do, I think, belong to each other, and we have to have some ways to look out after each other as human beings — especially when the human being in question is helpless.

Different communities and groups in a free democratic society can carry out necessary things that we all agree need to be done. Education, nursing the sick, services, etc. So why not have parents choose a child defender from a variety of choices — public, private and parochial? Pluralism would be safeguarded as long as standards of knowledge and competency were set by common law. If things were set up right, I think most parents would welcome another adult source of help and support.

One of the worst pressures in raising children in our mobile society is the helpless feeling of being unable to turn to family, friends or anyone else for help.

Most parents have nightmares of having a crisis situation arise in which they cannot provide what their child needs. Since our children are the most important factor in our human future, parents should be able to get help from the whole community.

In the same way, the child who is being seriously let down by his parents should not have to be solely at their mercy.

Every society has always had informal ways of mitigating the influence of bad parents. In fact, in most societies, spreading around the pressure and responsibility kept a weak parent from breaking under the strain.

But with the disappearance of aunts, cousins, grandparents, godparents and fellow guild members, we have to find substitute supports for the family.

Contrary to rumor, there is a mean between the extremes of children as private parental property and children brainwashed to be totalitarian robots. If we believe in the family, we'd better get busy and do things to keep it from breaking down.

THIS BUILDING became the tallest in Toronto's skyline and the British Commonwealth during 1971. It is the Commerce Court West tower, one of four buildings in the $100 million office, parking and shopping complex in downtown Toronto. The building is 57 storeys and 784 feet above the intersection of King and Bay streets. An FM radio antenna reaches up another 158 feet. Reflected in the tower is the Bank of Commerce building, once the highest building in the Commonwealth.

Process Found For Rough Fish

WINNIPEG (CP) — Rough, bony fish, formerly spurned by both processors and consumers and allowed to multiply in Manitoba lakes, will soon be marketed in a variety of reconstituted products.

The general manager of the Freshwater Fish Marketing Corp. says new processing techniques, including the introduction of the Baader deboner in Canada, have enabled species like mullet and maria (freshwater cod) to be prepared in an edible form.

D. F. Corney said freshwater cod has been tested in hospitals and other outlets and found to be superior to ocean cod, without the high water content.

Mr. Corney said the inland fishing industry has concentrated on marketing fresh whole game fish like pickerel and sauger and ignored the rough fish because they are difficult to debone.

He said there is not much more bone in mullet than in pickerel but the bones are spread throughout the flesh and difficult to withdraw.

SQUEEZES OUT BONE

The Baader deboner, a stainless steel bone separator imported from Germany for $6,000, uses a squeezing operation involving steel drums and belt mechanisms. Cleaned, headless fish are fed into the machine and skin, bones and bits of fin and tail are forced out in one direction and shredded flesh in another.

The marketing organization was established as a Crown corporation in 1969 and made responsible for the sale of all fish caught commercially in the three Prairie provinces, northwestern Ontario and the Northwest Territories.

Mr. Corney said the developments will aid fishermen, the balance of nature and consumers.

"Over the next five years, we're aiming at producing 20 million pounds of fish a year. The biggest portion of this could be rough fish."

Mr. Corney said the corporation is to begin operating a $4.5-million processing plant in suburban Transcona with full marketing of rough fish products expected to be under way next summer. The plant will employ up to 250 people and will supply everything from fresh and frozen whole fish to filets and reconstituted fish products.

'Cards Instead Of Guns'

ENLO PARK, Calif. (UPI) — Credit cards may be extinct by 1980, a Stanford Research Institute economist said Tuesday.

"Criminals have begun to use stolen cards instead of guns," said economist Ray Zablocki in the institute's Publication, Investments in Tomorrow.

Abuses are so widespread that some credit card companies may be losing as much as half their gross profits, Zablocki said, and present methods of curbing losses due to stolen cards have been largely ineffective.

He said in New York City a stolen card sells for between $75 and $200.

There are methods that can be developed to stop abuses, such as voice prints or fingerprints to verify a card owner, said Zablocki, but the practical difficulties of developing an effective system nationwide "are mind-boggling."

Disclosure Order Clarified

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Securities Commission has issued a statement clarifying an earlier timely disclosure policy and setting up procedures for confidential disclosure to the commission.

The policy, announced earlier this month, requires companies to inform the commission of proposed or actual changes in control of the company, actual or proposed acquisition or disposal of material assets, proposed mergers, takeovers, consolidations or reorganizations and proposed changes in capital structure including stock splits, stock dividends or conversions.

The disclosure to the commission is required prior to disclosure to the public. The policy applies to both listed and unlisted companies.

The OSC said its earlier statement requiring the disclosures has caused concern but said Monday it needs to be advised so it could be prepared to stop trading if necessary to afford an opportunity for dissemination of information.

"Being aware of the developments, before the information is published, the commission also may be alert to stop trading where it appears the market is responding to rumors and not to fact," the commission said.

The commission said that since timing is "often critical," the disclosures may be made on the telephone. The advice to the commission will be kept confidential, the OSC said. It said personal or telephone discussions should be held only with the chairman, vice-chairman, director or chief legal investigation officer. Written communication should be addressed to the chairman and marked confidential.

Stock Market 'Price Bust' Aided by Brokers—Report

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has accused brokerage houses of mismanagement during a stock market volume boom — and later of helping to precipitate a stock market price bust.

Its charges are in a mammoth report of several hundred thousand words asking the U.S. Congress to give it more power to make more effective the "self-regulation" system which has policed the securities industry since Congress created the SEC in response to the 1929 stock market crash.

Its recommendations may disappoint some who believe that self-regulation is inadequate. Sen. Harrison A. Williams Jr., (D—N.J.), chairman of the Senate securities subcommittee, said in March he saw signs that self-regulation "is in some instances inadquate to meet the needs of the 70s."

SURGE OF ORDERS

The SEC criticism was aimed at the securities industry's reaction to the huge and unexpected surge of orders which occurred in 1967. It produced days in which more than 20 million shares changed hands — and the industry proved incapable of dealing with the resulting paperwork.

In the paper crisis, the SEC said, brokers' back offices became "a trackless forest" and brokers "lost control," with their records "a veritable shambles" in "the worst securities snarl ever experienced."

Before that problem had subsided, the industry helped create the market plunge of 1969-70 by investing too much of its own capital in stocks, rather than in improving its own operations. When it was forced to sell to raise cash, it fed the downturn in stock prices, the SEC said.

It also was critical of how the industry plays the market with money it does not own — the uninvested cash left in dealers' hands by their customers.

The customers realize none of the profits that might result when their money is used in that fashion.

To prevent a recurrence of the problem, the SEC asked Congress for more power to regulate the New York, American and regional stock exchanges and the National Association of Securities Dealers — the agencies that are supposed to regulate brokerage houses.

It also sought power to regulate banks in their role as stock depository agents and to regulate stock transfer agents, where some of the bottlenecks occurred.

REVIEW

It sought power to review rules of the self-regulators before, not after, these are put into effect and to discipline violators if the self-regulators are too lax.

At the height of the paperwork crisis, the SEC said, the industry "fails" — its failure to make timely delivery of stock certificates after an order had been placed — rose in dollar volume from $850 million at the end of 1966 to $4 billion at the end of 1968. They still amounted to $1 billion Nov. 30.

The report said the industry was slow to respond when hit by "events of virtual hurricane force" in the upsurge of volume in 1967.

LACK STAFF

It computerized without adequate knowledge or staff and destroyed its old paper records. When the computers malfunctioned, the problem had only been compounded.

"The combination of all of these factors culminated in such a critical predicament for some firms that they not only lost control of their records, but experienced a new phenomenon — the loss of control over the securities which were or were supposed to be in their possession for delivery, custody or safekeeping," the SEC said.

It criticized the industry for promoting workers on their ability to generate sales, not their executive talent, and for "lavishing" funds on expansion and on front-office furnishings rather than back office problems.

Alscope Signs Agreement For Honduras Pulp Mill

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alscope Consolidated Ltd. of Vancouver and Nacional Azucar, S.A., of Tegucigalpa, Honduras, have signed final agreements for the construction of an integrated pulp mill in Honduras at an estimated cost of $232,400,000.

The agreements were signed after more than a year of negotiations.

A detailed, on-site feasibility study is to be made and a 10-ton pilot mill is to be built at Toronto. It is estimated that nine months will be required to build the pilot plant and 2½ years more for the mill in Honduras.

The mill will consist of a 750-tons-per-day nitrocell pulp mill, corrugating medium and liner board plant with a sawmill and other related facilities. Estimated capacity is 262,000 tons a year of liner board and corrugating medium in addition to by-products.

The logging and sawmill part will produce an estimated 338 million board feet of lumber a year.

The construction contract is expected to give employment to about 16,000 people in Honduras.

Nacional Azucar has certified that financing has been arranged with European banks.

The Alscope nitrocell pulping process is a pollution-free method of making pulp from hard and soft woods and all types of agricultural cellulose wastes such as wheat straw, corn stalks and rice hulls. It is a patented process.

Suspension Kept Quiet

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Securities Commission earlier this month suspended the Montreal-based stockbroker firm of Holland Andrews Perrier and Co. from dealing with the public for a brief time, the president of the firm says.

Edgar Holland said the suspension lasted "a couple of days." The commission did not announce the suspension publicly.

Harry Bray, vice-chairman, declined comment except to say that the firm's registration now "is in good standing."

Mr. Holland said the suspension arose from the firm's failure to keep certain records in its Toronto office.

Holland Andrews Perrier and Co. has been in the news lately. Some stocks it underwrote were suspended from trading at Montreal, and a vice-president of the firm was "temporarily removed" as chairman of the Canadian Stock Exchange. The Montreal and Canadian exchanges have been investigating the firm.

Increased Demand For Paper Forecast

OTTAWA (CP) — Officials of the pulp and paper industry are expecting an increase in demand, the Commons was told Tuesday night.

Bruce Howard (L — Okanagan Boundary), parliamentary secretary to Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, said that during a recent meeting with government representatives, officials of the industry said they believe the bottom of the market has been reached and improvement is ahead.

Howard was replying to Jack Marshall (PC — Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe), who said he is disturbed about apparent government apathy towards the problems facing pulp and paper industries.

About 350 skilled workers in Corner Brook, Nfld., were losing jobs with the closing of a paper machine at the Bowarter operation, and a total of 1,200 would be indirectly affected.

Howard said the industry has always had a problem reconciling supply and demand, but the government is taking the present problems most seriously.

In the meeting with industry, the government had agreed to take on a study of taxation, transportion costs and long-range strategy.

Sanyo Plans Canada Plant

TOKYO (Reuter) — Sanyo Electric Co? Ltd. announced Tuesday a plan to establish a 50-50 joint venture in Canada next month with local interests for assembly of color and black-white television sets, stereophonic systems and other electric appliances for domestic sales in Canada.

The new firm, Sanyo Canada Ltd., capitalized at $500,000 to be equally shared by Magnasonic Canada Ltd., a Canadian trading firm, would be Sanyo's 13th overseas subsidiary to make its products.

Sanyo said it was expecting the new joint firm to sell about $4.6 million worth of the products in Canada next year.

N.S. Light Holds Out

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia Light and Power Co. Ltd. said Tuesday it has the support of 51 per cent of its shareholders in the bid to gain a better price for its shares.

A company spokesman said late Tuesday afternoon that 2,678,648 shares had been turned in to Montreal Trust Co. in support of the private utility.

The Nova Scotia government, through the Nova Scotia Power Commission, announced earlier this month it would pay $13 a share in order to obtain control of the power company.

Mobil

Net income shot up $43 million to $391.3 million for the nine months ended Sept. 30 to produce $3.86 a share compared with a year earlier, reports Mobil Oil Corp., of New York.

Sales and revenues totalled $6.889 billion, against $6.067 billion in the 1970 period, and costs rose from $5.7 billion to $6.498 billion.

In the third quarter earnings were estimated at $134 million ($1.32) compared with $120.8 million ($1.19), or 11 per cent higher. Higher prices coupled with increased production, particularly overseas, were credited with much of the gain.

Cats Enjoy Absenteeism; Fire Seven Goals at Blades

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Players come and players go but the frequent missing-from-action reports fail to deter Victoria Cougars from occasionally recording a Western Canada Hockey League success.

In fact, absenteeism seems to have a catalytic effect, or why have the Cougars rushed out of the Western Division cellar by winning three of their last four games?

And why have the Cougars, whose goal-scoring average was an anemic 2.6 over the first 31 games, suddenly exhibited a new-found scoring touch?

The Cougars added to their plus factors Tuesday by slapping the Saskatoon Blades 7-4 at Memorial Arena to take over sole possession of fifth place.

Tuesday's goals production gives the Cougars a total of 20 in their past four games. And it all happened after Rod Loynachan and, then, Wayne Bianchin took their unexpected leaves from the Victoria scene.

There is no doubt the walkouts by a pair of well-regarded wingers have upset coach Fred Hucul's long-range planning. Bianchin came around to watch the Cougars topple the big Saskatoon squad but his status, as well as Loynachan's, remains uncertain pending general manager Eric Bishop's return from a league meeting in Edmonton.

But if the other players are upset by the walkouts, they have disguised their feelings with a effort and hustle.

That was the case again Tuesday. Technically, Cougars have played better games. But they gave it their best shot of spirit and desire, and that set up a seven-goal barrage against a team that sports the third-best defensive record in the 12-team league.

CARTER STARTS IT

Carter got the Cougars started with the game's first goal, then put Gary Donaldson into the clear for an important third-period effort that wiped out any comeback hopes the Blades might have had.

Greg Robinson, the oldest Cougar from a point of service, improved on his strong performances in recent games. The 18-year-old winger enjoyed a four-point night with a goal and three well-deserved assists.

He back-checked brilliantly and twice nullified icing-the-puck calls by beating Saskatoon defenders to the puck.

Robinson, in his third term as a Cougar, now has scored four goals and five assists in the last four Victoria games. Before than, he managed only three goals and three assists in 31 games.

COHESION LACKING

Doug Manchak, Tom Pinder, Lawrence Sacharuk and Murray Myers scored for Saskatoon, which had to rely on the power-play to count two of the four goals.

The Cougars won it despite a mediocre passing performance. There was little or no cohesion between Victoria's forwards and defencemen, but Cougars atoned for that particular failing with a very strong forechecking display.

CASUAL DEFENCE

The forechecking was directly responsible for four of Victoria's goals as the Cougars were quick to capitalize on mistakes made by a lumbering and too-casual Saskatoon defence.

As usual, the cougars were again supported by strong netminding. Darryl Fedorak made 28 stops compared to the 15 handled by the Saskatoon pair of Ed Humphreys and Sam Clegg.

The Cougars, ending an eight-game layoff, now swing their attention towards Regina Pats. The Eastern Division leaders will make their first-ever appearance in Memorial Arena on Saturday.

Ullman Gets Three As Tenacity Helps

NORM ULLMAN
. . . assisted by luck

By The Canadian Press

Seventeen years in the big leagues haven't dulled the performance of Norm Ullman. To the contrary, his value appears to be on the rise.

Ullman, 36 last Sunday, scored three goals Tuesday night, including one into an empty net while steering Toronto Maple Leafs past Pittsburgh Penguins 4-2 in the only scheduled National Hockey League game.

CREDITS LUCK

It's been two years since the slick Leaf centre scored three goals in one game, but he's the first to admit Tuesday night's production was partly due to anything but luck.

Tenacious forechecking and playmaking has been Ullman's forte with Toronto, and it was evident in his play against Pittsburgh.

He was on the spot to cash in on Denis Dupere's rebound to open the scoring in the first period, tipped in Jim Dorey's blast from the blueline in the second, then slid in Paul Henderson's passout to close the scoring with 18 seconds left in the game.

ACTED IN SELF-DEFENCE

"The second goal actually was in self-defence," admitted the Provost, Alta., native after the game. "I saw the puck coming and was trying to get out of the way.

Elsewhere in the NHL Tuesday, Detroit pared its roster, farming out veteran wingers Ab McDonald and Brian Conacher.

McDonald, 35, was assigned to Wings' Tidewater club in the American League while Conacher, 30-year-old son of former NHL star Lionel Conacher, went to Fort Worth Wings of the Central League.

Boston has lost only one of its last 19 games, and Chicago is on an eight-game win streak— longest in the NHL this season.

Lifted Goalie Returns To Rescue Oil Kings

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Oil Kings, scrapping for the West Division lead in the Western Canada Hockey League, pulled within three points of idle Calgary Tuesday night by edging east-division leaders Regina Pats 5-4 in Edmonton.

In game, Medicine Hat Tigers ended a three-game losing streak with a 5-1 decision over Swift Current Broncos.

The Oil Kings, outshot 46-25, scored on four of their seven second-period shots to overcome a 3-1 deficit and carry a 5-3 advantage into the final period.

Edmonton goalie Doug Soetaert was pulled in favor of Larry Hendrick after Scott Smith, Glen Burden and Al Barrett scored easy Regina goals in the opening period, but he returned late in the second after Hendrick was struck on the face mask and played brilliantly.

In the final period, Regina outshot Edmonton 21-5, but only Clark Gillies managed to beat Soetaert, the goal coming when Regina had a two-man advantage.

'Exercise' Games Planned

HELSINKI (AP) — A team of Canadian schoolboy hockey players, barred from making a tour of Finland, may play some "exercise" games.

Ottawa East Voyageurs, boys nine and 10 years old, were forbidden from playing scheduled matches against Finnish youngsters after the International Ice Hockey Federation threatened reprisals because the tour was arranged without IIHF authorization.

IIHF President Bunny Ahearne threatened to take the 1974 world hockey championships away from Finland if the tour went on.

The visitors did not learn of the decision until they arrived in Helsinki Tuesday. Goeran Stubb, captain of the IFK Helsinki team, said afterwards: "Real club matches are out of the question for the Voyageurs." But he added that training will be arranged for them, and some "excercise" matches may be played.

NEW GLEASON TOURNEY RICHEST ON GOLF TOUR

NEW YORK (AP) — The $260,000 Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic, one of four new tournaments on the 1972 Professional Golfers' Association tour announced Tuesday, will surpass the Westchester Classic as pro golf's richest.

The Inverrary Classic, Feb. 24-27 in Lauderhill, Fla., helped boost the total season purse to a record $7,439,000, up $341,000 over 1971.

The season, which begins Jan. 6-9 with the $125,000 Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open, will include a record 45 major tournaments, 18 satellites and four Caribbean tour events.

Among tournaments posting at least $200,000 in prize money in addition to the Inverrary, is the new USI Classic Aug. 17-20 at Pleasant Valley Country Club in Sutton, Mass. The $200,000 event replaces the Massachusetts Classic.

Other rich events are the $200,000 Hawaiian Open in Honolulu Feb. 3-6; the $200,000 national team championship at Laurel Valley in Ligonier, Pa., July 27-30 and the $250,000 Westchester Classic Aug. 10-13 in Harrison, N.Y.

The Masters Tournament at the Augusta National Golf Club in Augusta, Ga., April 6-9; the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, Calif., June 15-18, and the PGA Championship at Oakland Hills Country Club in Birmingham, Mich., Aug. 3-6, are expected to near or surpass the $200,000 mark although purses have yet to be announced.

Other tournaments on the schedule, which closes with the Bahamas Open Dec. 7-10, include the Canadian Open in Ridgeway, Ont., July 6-9.

Not listed on the regular PGA schedule is the World Cup which will be played Nov. 9-12 at Melbourne, Australia, and the World Series of Golf at the Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio, Sept. 9-10.

Victoria, Saanich Clash In Midget Hockey Contest

NORTH VANCOUVER — Victoria Metro Toyota tumbled New Westminster 7-2 Tuesday in the B.C. midget hockey jamboree at North Shore Winter Club.

Saanich Braves, who topped defending-champion North Kamloops 4-2 Monday, were to provide the opposition for Victoria in an afternoon game today.

In another Tuesday contest, Nanaimo Clippers were knocked out of the competition by dropping a 3-2 decision to Prince George.

Nanaimo blanked Oliver 8-0, Prince George nipped Comox 6-5 in double overtime and host North Shore trounced Esquimalt Reps 9-0, in other Monday contests which opened the four day event.

Rick Turcotte, Terry Shillington, Yvonne Clavette and Jim Story counted for Saanich, which has lost two out of the three meetings with Victoria this season in the Greater Victoria league.

Twenty-four teams from throughout B.C. are participating in the event. Only first round losers drop into the consolation "B" division of the tournament.

Toledo Skein Reaches 35

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — All-American Mel Long's shattering tackle and fumble recovery for a touchdown ignited Toledo to its 35th straight victory, a 28-3 triumph over Richmond in the Tangerine Bowl Tuesday night.

Toledo quarterback Chuck Ealey continued a personal winning streak of 65 games, dating back to the ninth grade, completing 14 of 23 passes for 176 yards.

South Wins

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Rice halfback Stahle Vincent's touchdown and a field goal by George Hunt of Tennessee gave the South a 9-0 victory Tuesday night in a Blue-Grey football game which had the makings of a wide-open aerial duel but developed instead into a tight defensive struggle.

Head coach Jim Spavital, who took the Bombers to the WFC playoffs for the first time in five years last season, has already signed a contract for the 1972 season.

Streaking Lakers Head for Seattle

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles Lakers are alone at the top of the pro basketball world, but coach Bill Sharman keeps looking for new mountains to climb.

"Seattle is the team we have to beat," the coach said Tuesday night after the Lakers had lengthened the National Basketball Association's longest-ever winning streak to 29 games with a 105-87 victory over Buffalo Braves.

The SuperSonics, Los Angeles' next opponent in Seattle Thursday night, have been the victims three times during the streak, but Sharman reminded his listeners: "They are the only team to beat us on the road this year and they are No. 2 in our division."

What he didn't mention was that Seattle trails the Lakers by 14 games in the Pacific Division.

The Lakers' fantastic streak is overshadowing some other burgeoning winning skeins. Boston Celtics, down by 16 points in the third period, rallied to make it nine in a row wth a 120-116 triumph over Philadelphia '76ers.

KNICKS EXTEND STREAK

New York Knicks ran their string to seven, pulling away from Detroit in the second quarter and trouncing the Pistons 119-110. And Chicago's streak reached six as the Bulls turned back Milwaukee Bucks 116-105 with Bob Rule getting 27 points in the second half and outscoring Kareem Jabbar 41-35.

Elsewhere, Baltimore Bullets walloped Cincinnati Royals 119-87 and Cleveland Cavaliers nipped Portland Trailblazers 112-111.

Elmore Smith, Buffalo's seven-foot rookie, floated eight-to-10-foot hooks over Lakes centre Wilt Chamberlain all night.

Smith scored 17 points in the first quarter, when the Braves took a 34-27 lead, and wound up with 32 points and 20 rebounds, both game highs.

PLAYOFF FORMAT DECIDED

EDMONTON (CP) — General managers of the 12 Western Canada Hockey League teams met Tuesday to decide playoff format for this season.

The first-place team in each of the two divisions will meet the fourth-place team with second and third-place clubs meeting in the other semi-final

The winners of the division finals then will meet in the league championship.

All series will be the best-of-seven. In past years, the league final was a best-of-nine series.

The league reviewed the refereeing and executive secretary Tom Fisher of New Westminster said "the league is concerned, as are the referees, about the inconsistency of officiating around the league."

Fisher also said the all-star teams for the Jan. 19 game in Vancouver will be selected by the coaches of the teams.

Finding Your Way There Could Promote Respect

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Quite a few requests come this way for more "how-to-get-there" columns, which for two main reasons we must decline ... first there is the selfish wish to keep our favorite haunts a relative secret ... we've seen the results of high use by irresponsible individuals in some wilderness areas and have absolutely no desire to sponsor more of the same ... despite the current environmental awareness, it is becoming increasingly apparent that many people only pay lip service to the creed of "packing it out" ... litter continues to pile up at an alarming rate ... secondly, and perhaps related to the first reason, is our belief that getting to these spots is half the fun ... interesting lakes, rivers and streams can be located by careful consultation of topographical maps ... but don't place too much faith in the location of roads on these maps, only exploration by trial and error can provide the best means of access ... and perhaps through this searching, rather than getting a step-by-step route on a platter, a greater appreciation is born.

Approximately 25,500 two-inch rainbow trout fingerlings were planted by aircraft in nine Vancouver Island lakes during the month of November ... these fish, one of the introduced species on the Island, were dumped into the lakes from an height of about 400 feet ... tests have shown that fingerlings of this size suffer no adverse affects from the drop ... lakes stocked were Gillespie, Flora, Gracie, Marshy, Lowry, Darkis, Martha, Hayes and Tlowils.

Forest Industry Facts, the monthly organ for Council of the Forest Industries of British Columbia, came out with a little gem in the December issue ... the article points out that: "Roads are the arteries of logging. They also provide a public recreation facility which, without the forest companies, might have been decades more in coming. Although unsurfaced for the ging road lace the B.C. forests. Although unsurfaced for the most part, they are masterpieces of the industrial road builder's art, built to ensure maximum safety for mammoth loads" ... true, but only in part ... how long do they maintain these "recreational facilities" after the need for their "mammoth loads" is over? ... and how often are they inefficiently designed — allowing siltation of adjacent streams and rivers? ... the forest industry is changing its habits for the better ... but as a result of public and governmental pressure, not out of altruism.

South Vancouver Island Rangers will hold a turkey, chicken and ham trap shoot from 10 a.m. 'til dark on Sunday ... the SVIR grounds are on Luxton Road, reached either by Sooke or Happy Valley roads.

Fish and wildlife branch road checks indicate that the 1971 deer season produced better-than-average bags for northern-Island hunters and poorer-than-average returns for their south-Island counterparts ... This discrepancy is attributed to two factors ... one: in the south, logging has removed much of the lower-elevation timber utilized by deer for winter range while at the same time, dense stands of young conifers in these logged-over areas have choked out many of the plants deer feed on in the summer ... in the northern part of the Island, there appears to be a better ratio of recently-logged areas which deer use in the summer to mature timber utilized for shelter in the winter ... and second: the 1970-71 winter was harsher in the southern part of the Island, perhaps aggravated by the absence of low-level timber ... maybe in the future the balance will shift back to the south.

We were pleased to note this week that Don Robinson, assistant director of the fish and wildlife branch, has come forward to state that the compulsory examination for all first-time hunters and firearms users beginning this April will not be based on the 20-hour hunter training, conservation and outdoor safety course ... the exam will consist of questions on gun safety, game identification where that has shown to be a problem and survival in the woods ... books for the new examination course, similar to that put out by the department of motor vehicles, are now being printed ... but we believe, also, that the extensive volunteer course, first started in B.C. early in 1969 by Paul Presidente, is well worth the time spent on it.

Fergie Matches Rocket's Record

TOP MALE ATHLETE

By Canadian Press

Fergie Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., 28-year-old right-hander for Chicago Cubs of the National League, is Canada's outstanding male athlete of 1971, only the second man ever to win the honor three times.

Jenkins, who won previously in 1967 and 1968, ties the record of Maurice Richard, retired Rocket of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, who was picked in 1952, 1957 and 1958.

The poll is conducted by the Canadian Press among sports writers and broadcasters across the country.

FIVE 20-WIN SEASONS

Jenkins, a 20-game winner in each of the last five baseball seasons, won over Phil Esposito of hockey's Boston Bruins, and world-record harness-racing driver Herve Filion.

FERGUSON JENKINS

. . . for third time

Electors were asked to give first, second and third choices and ballots were graded 3-2-1 respectively.

Jenkins came through with 232 points to 187 for Esposito, highest single-season scorer in the history of the NHL, and 150 for Filion, the Angers, Que., driver with a career record of 3,460 victories.

JONAS RATED FOURTH

Don Jonas, although a United States citizen, came fourth on the strength of his performance as quarterback of Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference.

George Athans, Kelowna, B.C., athlete now studying in Montreal, was close behind Jonas. Athans won the world water-skiing championship in Spain last September.

SEVERAL RECORDS

Jenkins is the first Canadian to receive a major baseball award, winning the Cy Young Award for 1971. A 6-foot-5, 205-pounder, Jenkins compiled a 24-13 record for the Cubs, the most victories in the National League.

In the five seasons starting with 1967, he won 20, 20, 21, 22 and 24 games. He averaged better than 315 innings and 261 strikeouts over those five seasons. His over-all record for six-plus seasons in the majors is 115-81.

Esposito's name crowds the NHL record books.

His 76 goals in 78 games during the 1970-71 season constitute a record; so does his mark of 152 points in one season. His 25 power-play goals last year is the record for that category. Esposito centred the most productive line of any season, between right-winger Ken Hodge and Wayne Cashman, which accounted for 140 goals. Their 336 points is also a one-line, one-season record.

Filion, in addition to his career record, had 543 victories this year, another world mark, as are his total earnings of $1,773,000 for one season.

The record of which he is most proud, however, is five sub-two-minute miles on one program.

Czechs Clipped By Americans

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Stu Irving rammed in two second-period goals Tuesday night as the United States shook off a first-night defeat by beating Czechoslovakia, 7-5, in World Cup hockey championship play.

The U.S. was humiliated, 13-3, by the Russians Monday night in first-round play.

Caron Moves Up

DENVER (CP-AP) — Veteran Jacques Caron, goalkeeper for Denver Spurs of the Western Hockey League, was called up Tuesday by the parent St. Louis Blues of the National League.

Bowler-of-Week Event Resumes on Saturday

Pin-spillers on the southern portion of Vancouver Island have to wait only until Saturday to resume efforts to earn weekly awards in the ninth annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition.

The customary two-week Christmas break is being observed again this year from Dec. 18 until the first day of the New Year.

Eleven weeks of the 26-week competition have been completed with all bowlers completing in league play eligible for awards in four divisions — men's and women's fivepins, and men's and women's tenpins.

FINALS IN APRIL

All weekly winners qualify for finals in April rolloffs, scheduled for April 23 and April 30. This season, for the first time, bowlers may chase rolloff crowns in more than one division.

Fivepinners are scheduled to roll for Bowler-of-the-Year honors on April 23, at Town and Country Lanes, while tenpinners will be in action on April 30, at Mayfair Lanes. In previous seasons, fivepin and tenpin rolloffs were staged at the same time.

Each rolloff winner will receive a Times Trophy and any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to The Times will collect a bonus award of $100.

TWO TOP 900

Three distaff fivepinners broke the "900" barrier during the pre-Christmas portion of this season's contest.

Sandar Wood connected for the highest fivepin score among both male and female contestants with a sparkling 983 series during the third week in the Classic League at Gibson's Bowladrome. Irene Waldron (924) of Duncan, and Dot Krimmer (923) also hit over 900.

Carol Newcomb topped the women's tenpin division with a 635 tally rolled during the seventh week. Jessie Holding (614) and Marlene Mitchell (602) also broke the 600 barrier.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 21-year-old man who was released from prison on parole in August was sentenced to four months Tuesday by Judge William Ostler for possession of heroin.

Robert William Woods, 632 Raynor, pleaded guilty Dec. 16.

Court was told that the accused was found with 17 capsules of heroin when police searched his home Dec. 8.

Woods was given a four month definite sentence with eight months indeterminate last May for trafficking in LSD. He was released on parole in August and was to end the parole in April.

Beverly Anne LeBlanc, 18, of 1726 Stanley, was fined $500 and placed on a three-year probation by Ostler for two drug offences.

The accused was found guilty Dec. 16 of possessing 36 grams of hashish and 13 tablets of MDA at her residence last June 9.

A second female accused had the same charges against her dismissed when the LeBlanc girl was convicted.

Maurice A. Dupuis, 32, of 1225 Walnut, was fined $250 when he pleaded guilty to driving while suspended.

Court was told that the accused had his licence suspended by officers about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday and he was caught driving his auto at Bay and Quadra 10 minutes later.

Patrick B. Kavanagh, 21, of CFB Naden, was fined $35 when he pleaded guilty to obtaining food by fraud.

The accused ran from a Yates Street restaurant about 11 p.m. Dec. 10 with three other persons without paying for a $6.40 bill.

David Hopwood, 31, of Port Angeles, Wash., was sentenced to 20 days in jail by Judge E. F. N. Robinson, for two impaired driving offences.

Hopwood pleaded guilty to impaired driving July 17, 1970 and Dec. 23, 1971.

Robinson gave the man 14 days for the first offence and 20 days for the second to be served concurrently. He was prohibited from driving for a year.

Ireland Friends Contribute $100 to Cause

A cheque for $100 toward the relief of Northern Ireland families victimized by hostilities there has been sent off by Victoria's recently-formed Friends of Ireland Club.

Mrs. Peggy McNulty, 979 Eagle Rock Terrace, one of the founders of the club, said plans for public fund raising were damaged by the "untrue" charges earlier this month of Rev. Gilbert Smith, a native Ulsterman who is minister of Trinity Presbyterian Church here.

Smith had contended that the club was actually "an association of the gathering of funds for the Irish Republican Army."

Club vice-president Kevin Cahill has issued a written challenge to Smith to take up debate at the University of Victoria over what is the real situation in Northern Ireland.

To date, Smith has not replied, Mrs. McNulty said.

She added that she has no interest in the debate but only in gathering funds for relief work in Belfast.

She said that most of the $100 was raised among the club's 25 members.

Chilean Book Hits Disney Characters

SANTIAGO (AP) — A new book, How to Read Donald Duck, which attacks Donald and other Walt Disney characters as "class enemies" of Chile's leftist government and its supporters, has become a big seller here.

Since its release last week, the 161-page book, which among other things claims a "sado-masochistic" relationship exists between Donald and his nephews, has been snapped up in bookstores.

"We're all out," a clerk said Tuesday in the biggest book store in Santiago. Other stores also reported that their stocks were exhausted.

The book was written by two leftists, Ariel Dorfman, a literary critic who works in the juvenile publications division of Quimantu, the government publishing house and Armand Mattelart, who heads Quimantu's "mass communications" division.

The publishing house recently published several works aimed at Chilean youth to compete with Disney comic books, widely distributed here in Spanish, and other non-government publications.

Dorman and Mattelart says the Disney comics are a threat to "the Chilean reality" as the Allende government works to transform Chile into a socialist state because they advocate such "bourgeois" institutions as free enterprise.

HOLLISTER, Calif. (AP) — Seven minor earthquakes along the San Andreas Fault have rolled through the hill country south of here, startling residents but causing no damage.

"Just a little rock and roll, but not too much shake," said Deputy Sheriff Gene Beresini of San Benito County. He said many residents called his office to report the quakes Tuesday but said none reported any property damage.

Bill Splits Parties

OTTAWA (CP) — Party lines appeared to be crumbling around the government's controversial farm legislation Tuesday night, amid growing fears the Commons could be in for a long siege before beginning a winter holiday.

All parties scheduled caucus meetings today to decide on their strategies for the bill that brought MPs back to Ottawa for an unusual Christmas-week sitting—and it appeared as though most parties were facing strong internal divisions.

The Liberal government was insisting the bill—to allow creation of national marketing boards for farm produce—be passed before the House adjourned, probably until Feb. 16. The Conservatives were insisting that cattle be excluded specifically from the legislation, and the government had agreed to this amendment. The New Democratic Party, led in this case by Arnold Peters (Timiskaming), was holding up passage of the bill by insisting that cattle be included.

Most MPs returned here Tuesday believing it would take only a few days for the NDP spokesmen to run out of steam and allow the legislation to pass with cattle excluded.

ARGUMENTS HARDENING

But with Christmas dinners digested, and most MPs annoyed by the Christmas-week sittings, the arguments appeared to be widening and hardening Tuesday. By the end of the day, inter-party negotiations had achieved no progress and some internal differences were beginning to spill out.

And, generally, the division was between East and West. Most western MPs, it seems, want cattle excluded from the legislation while eastern MPs generally favor their inclusion.

The greatest strains are said to be in the Liberal party, where there is growing resistance to the decision of Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson to allow cattle out of the legislation.

"This would be a straight victory for (Jack) Horner," says a western Liberal. Mr. Horner, Conservative MP for Crowfoot, has fought since last spring to have cattle removed from the legislation.

"I don't give a darn what agreements have been reached," said the Liberal MP, "We can't go along with that."

The Liberal division first spilled out into the open Tuesday when Murray McBride (Renfrew - Lanark - Carleton) urged MPs to reject any attempt to remove cattle from the legislation.

"Some of those fellows from the Prairies over there leave it to the people over here like myself to defend Western Canada," he told the House.

"Where are the people from Nova Scotia and rural Alberta who should be prepared to get up and say, 'I believe in the small farmer enough that I want them to have some legislation' . . . ?"

PARTIES AT STALEMATE

Inter-party negotiations were said to have broken down Tuesday when party representatives acknowledged that they couldn't speak, with any form of commitment, on behalf of their parties. Today's caucuses would have to make some basic decisions.

Unless some agreement is reached, there could be a long session ahead. The government is said to be extremely reluctant to use any form of debate limit on the measure—since it would follow on the heels of the debate-limiting devices used on the new tax legislation. On the other hand, one cabinet minister said the government is prepared to sit until Feb. 15, if necessary, to get the farm legislation approved.

Find the Right Words And History Is Made

I have been patiently waiting for someone with more competence to mark the hundredth anniversary of Stanley's meeting with Livingstone and the occasion of those immortal words: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" but the actual date, Nov. 10, 1871, has come and gone and I mustn't let the year slip away without doing my duty.

You'll be wondering why a mere strip of a lad (me) should care about a man whose exploits took place a full century ago, but the bizarre fact is that if Sir Henry Morton Stanley hadn't lived and hadn't done what he did I wouldn't be sitting at this Remington Standard this red hot minute. He was my father's boyhood hero, the example that took him into newspapering, and my father was my boyhood hero and that's how it was. I'd have been happier, perhaps, if my old man had been inspired by J. Pierpont Morgan, but fate is funny that way.

Stanley's place in history rests on his meeting with Livingstone (at Ujiyi on the shores of Lake Tanganyika) and, more importantly, his later discovery and development of the Congo, but my father's interest in him was not as an intrepid explorer, but only as a journalist.

When my father joined the Winnipeg Free Press as a junior reporter he was fully prepared to travel to the ends of the earth to earn what Stanley, more than slightly egocentric, referred to as "the kudos." Instead, the Free Press gave him a bicycle and sent him out on the hotel beat. He'd have made Stanley a bum if they'd given him an elephant and an assignment in darkest Africa, but my father never regretted his choice and loved the newspaper business all the days of his life.

* * *

I was weaned, so to speak, on "How I Found Livingstone" and "Through the Dark Continent" and the other splendid books by Stanley. Come to think of it, my own earliest dreams of finding fame and fortune as a fearless correspondent were enflamed, I suspect, by that unforgettable scene when James Gordon Bennett, who owned the New York Herald, summonsed Stanley and, in just two words, gave him the assignment: "Find Livingstone."

Livingstone wasn't all that lost, mind you. He'd simply disappeared after 1866 on his expedition to find the source of the Nile, though he'd been pretty much abandoned by his sponsors.

The eventual meeting at Ujiyi has long since been neatly packaged by the anecdotal historians, those academic re-write boys who delight in retailing it as an example of British reserve and formality. In fact it was one of the most emotion-charged, poignant moments imaginable.

Stanley, for all his genius, was a loud-mouthed, arrogant, hard-nosed, harsh and humorless man, but on that night before the meeting, when Selim, his safari chief, brought the news that poor old Livingstone was waiting somewhere up ahead on the lake shore, my father's hero seemed something less than a man of iron.

"What would I not have given," he wrote later in his autobiography, "for a bit of friendly wilderness where, unseen, I might vent my joy in some mad freak, such as idiotically biting my hand, turning a somersault, or slashing at trees, in order to allay those exciting feelings that were well-nigh uncontrollable. My heart beat fast, but I must not let my face betray my emotions, lest it shall detract from the dignity of a white man appearing under such circumstances."

The confrontation, itself, was by no means as casual and abrupt as the legend-makers have made it seem.

* * *

Stanley remembered: "I took off my hat and said, 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume?' 'Yes,' he said, with a kind smile, lifting his cap slightly. I replaced my hat on my head and he replaced his cap and we both grasped hands, and then I said aloud, 'I thank God, Doctor, I have been permitted to see you.' He answered, 'I feel thankful that I am here to welcome you'."

I was always interested in that particular scene because my father had developed a theory that the meeting would never have occurred had it not been for that deathless phrase.

It was clear from his journals and the stories that he sent back to the Herald, in my father's opinion, that Stanley was more than once tempted to give up the search. He had been a full 14 months on the road, by way of Jerusalem, Constantinople, the Crimea, Persia and way points. The subsequent expedition into Africa in search of Livingstone was keeping him out of the public eye, far from the kudos he loved. There were serious doubts in his own mind if it was worth all the effort.

"Being a great newspaperman," my father would speculate, "Stanley had probably given plenty of thought to what he would say if, in fact, he met up with Livingstone. It was crucial to the story, you see, that the encounter should be dramatized in some absolutely classic words. He probably lay awake in his tent at night thinking of this.

"He could say, 'Well! If it isn't Dr. Livingstone!' Or he could say, 'Howdy! My name is Stanley!' Or he could say, 'You must be the fellow I'm looking for.' None of them, of course, would do. Then, as I see it, it came to him. 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume!' It had everything. It made the story, don't you see? And so he kept on and the rest was history."

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Remember when postage for a letter always cost five cents?

That was only three years ago.

Then the Canadian government raised it to six cents and took away Saturday delivery.

Now that you are barely used to that, the price will go up to eight cents starting New Year's Day.

The new rate applies to letters within Canada, the United States, its territories and possessions and the tiny French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

Big Workshirt Issue Still Burning Question

Victoria's so-called burning workshirts burn very poorly at best, according to deputy fire chief Carl Coates.

Coates said today that he bought one of the shirts at Zeller's department store Tuesday; tested it but found it did not burn well. The Fire Marshall's office in Vancouver is conducting further tests.

A controversy over the shirts began smouldering Monday after a Saanich man reported finding the nap of his green and black checked workshirt burning after he lit a cigarette.

Saanich police tested the shirt, said it was "quite flammable" and advised anyone who bought one to return it to the store.

But Coates suggested that people observe a cooling off period until the Fire Marshall's report takes the heat off — or turns it on — depending on how their tests go.

Coates said he wanted to point out that all materials are combustible to a greater or lesser degree.

"Even concrete will burn," he observed.

The deputy said "the old match test" will give an indication of how a fabric will burn.

Coates said the workshirt had "minute particles" on the surface as part of the finish but he added that these would probably disappear in the first washing.

Ask The Times

Q. Please tell me about the Flying Scotsman locomotive. When was it built and when did it tour North America?—W.B.

A. The Flying Scotsman was built in 1922 and inaugurated the first non-stop passenger service from London to Edinburgh. A steam engine, it travelled the 393 miles in 8 hours, 15 minutes.

British millionaire Alan Pegler saved it from destruction a few years ago by buying it from British Railways. By convincing the British government that the train would be useful to promote British exports, he helped finance its U.S. tour.

The Flying Scotsman began a 2,200-mile tour of 12 U.S. cities Oct. 8, 1969. It had nine exhibition cars, including pubs, the Royal Shakespeare Company, and two Edwardian Pullman coaches which were used by Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower during the Second World War.

Hunt Pressed For City Girl

The 55-foot RCMP patrol boat Sidney and the Victoria detachment's Grumman Goose aircraft expanded the search today for two persons presumed lost in a mysterious boating accident Sunday.

* * *

An autopsy to determine cause of death was being carried out at Surrey on the mainland today.

They were reported missing Sunday when they failed to return to a marina at Crescent Beach near White Rock on the mainland.

* * *

It was picked up by the coast guard Ready four miles north of East Point on Saturna Island, a distance of between eight and 10 miles from where the body was found.

Maj. Gordon Bissell of the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre said the cause of the accident was still a mystery.

"There were no burn marks on either the body or the debris to indicate an explosion," he said.

He suggested the boat may have been run down by a large vessel during darkness.

Development Bylaw Faces Council Rebuff

Oak Bay council's bylaw designating the controversial Windsor block as a development area is doomed to failure unless two aldermen have a change of heart, the Times learned today.

On Dec. 20 the bylaw was given first, second and third readings. It still needs final reading to make it law.

Ald. Brian Smith, John Goult and Shirley Dowell were against the bylaw. They argued that such a major step should not be taken in the holiday season when people are involved with other matters.

TOO SOON

They also argued that it was too soon after the stormy public hearing that resulted in rejection of a bid by developer John Mace to build two nine-storey high-rises on the site.

Deputy minister of municipal affairs J. D. Baird, confirmed today that a development bylaw under section 702A of the Municipal Act requires a two-thirds majority to pass its final reading.

FIVE TO TWO

In Oak Bay this means a five to two vote is required to pass final reading. A simple majority is sufficient for first, second and third readings and the vote was 4 to 3 on Dec. 20.

Even if McLelland votes for the bylaw the impasse will remain.

Baird said the recently-introduced development legislation had only one main difference from that governing all zoning matters.

It does not require a public hearing.

This is necessary only when a developer and the council have reached the stage where a land-use contract is to be completed.

Mace has a proposition before council for a scaled-down development on the block which would include an inner courtyard, two four-storey apartment buildings, retail outlets and a service station.

TENDERS CALLED ON UVIC LIBRARY

The University of Victoria Tuesday called for tenders for a $3 million extension to McPherson Library.

Deadline is 2 p.m., Feb. 11, and construction, which will start immediately, is expected to be completed in June of 1973.

I. W. Campbell, acting director of campus planning, said today the extension, which will almost triple existing space of 86,000 square feet will end a situation where a half million books have crowded students out of studying space.

It will take care of library needs until 1981, and what space is not used by the library till then, will be used for other university purposes, Campbell said.

Sewer Cleanup Study Starts

A study aimed at cleaning up two major sources of sea and shore pollution in Greater Victoria is under way.

The Capital Regional District has commissioned a feasibility study of the Clover Point and McMicking Point sewer outfalls by J. F. McLaren Ltd., Ker, Priestman, Keenan and Associates Ltd. and Associated Engineering Services Ltd.

The firms, under project manager Larry McGill of J. F. McLaren Ltd., are expected to submit their report and recommendations by the end of April.

The regional board announced the study last September and said the cost would be not more than $80,000. The three firms were appointed in October but the maximum cost was raised to $95,000. The extra cost was necessitated by "the requirements of the study," said an official.

A general review of sewage disposal alternatives, by Associated Engineering Services Ltd. and Ker, Priestman, Keenan and Associates Ltd., produced a number of alternatives. The regional board narrowed this to two for the study now under way:

1. Diversion of sewage from Clover Point, in Victoria, and McMicking Point, in Oak Bay, through a connecting pipe to the new Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt;

2. Diversion of sewage from Clover Point and McMicking Point to a new outfall to be located offshore from Trial Island.

The general review put the cost of the first alternative at $9.2 million and the cost of the second between $10.1 million and $12.8 million; both including treatment plants costing $4 to $5 million.

The new Macaulay Point outfall, extending 6,100 feet from shore, discharges untreated sewage but land has been reserved for a treatment plant if studies show this is needed.

Clover Point outfall, built in 1894 and serving a major part of the city including down town, discharges sewage a few feet off shore.

McMicking Point outfall, built in 1913 and located near the Oak Bay golf course, serves much of Oak Bay and small parts of Victoria and Saanich. It also discharges a few feet from shore.

WELCOME HAND of Saanich Police Chief W. A. Pearson greets municipality's first full-time policewoman, Marjory Grondahl, 36. Miss Grondahl has been Pearson's secretary and performed department matron duties since August, 1969. Pearson retires Friday.

Metro Health Board Fades Out of '71

* * *

Disappearance in '72 Debated

Greater Victoria's metro health board wobbled through its final meeting of the year Tuesday when members agreed the board should disappear but unsure how.

In a pattern which has become traditional in recent months, most issues were pushed on to the next meeting, which in this case means to the new board for 1972.

The longest debate centred on how the health board can shift its job to the Capital Regional Board, a move first proposed about five years ago and actively sought for almost two years.

The transfer has been delayed by lengthy negotiations with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark over a cost-sharing formula. The province has offered to pay two-thirds of the costs with participating municipalities and districts paying the other third.

The board, which represents municipalities and districts from the Gulf Islands to Port Renfrew, has been arguing for a 30-70 split, approximately the basis of current cost-sharing.

Throughout the months of debate there has been growing impatience among Victoria, Esquimalt and Oak Bay representatives because the current formula has Saanich paying less than its proportionate share.

"I believe it to be hopeless at the present time," board chairman Frank Waring said Tuesday of the current administrative set-up.

Direct discussions with Loffmark had failed to budge the provincial government on its cost-sharing offer and Waring said he believed the transfer should take place in any event and an appeal to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell or the cabinet made over cost-sharing at a later date.

All parties, including the province, have agreed moving public health care under the wing of the regional board is a good idea, he said.

But when members came to vote on a resolution to get it under way, there were differences over how and an unwillingness to concede to the provincial cost-sharing offer.

A motion for board members to recommend to their parent bodies that regionalization be proceeded with immediately and to have the cost-sharing issue passed to the regional board was defeated 4-3. Some members wanted the offered formula referred to in the motion and others wanted the sought-after formula specified.

In the end members simply referred the matter to the next meeting, something they have been doing with a number of questions this year as the changeover appeared imminent.

Another issue which took a rough ride before being deferred was proposed regulations governing health conditions at marinas.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, the board's senior public health officer, had drafted the proposals with the idea the board would endorse and propose to the provincial government that they be passed to cover all B.C.

But both North Saanich and Oak Bay councils had argued the matter should be left as a municipal responsibility and there were arguments Tuesday that Whitbread already had authority to enforce health regulations because most waterfront municipalities had extended their jurisdiction 1,000 feet from shore.

Whitbread said there are no health regulations because applying to marinas and he did not have the power to enforce health regulations there.

The matter was put over until he has a chance to clarify the limits of his jurisdiction.

Two Bid to Break Farm Degree Jinx

WINNIPEG (CP) — An ex-truckdriver and a life-long "city-slicker" are hoping to shake a 30-year-old jinx and become the first women to graduate from a two-year diploma course in agriculture at the University of Manitoba.

The only other woman to enroll in the course did not graduate-back in the '40s.

But Alison Lord, 23, and Lyette Brochu, 19, are not put off by being only the second and third female students to attempt the course or by the off-color jokes between professors and their 120 male classmates.

Miss Lord, who has a couple of horses on her six-acre farm near Grande Pointe, Man., said she's had some "bad reactions" from male students who are annoyed when her marks are higher than theirs.

Miss Brochu of Suburban St. Norbert said: "You have to be a bit hard, because if you let things bug you, you'd drop out. You have to get right in there with the guys."

Neither of the girls could definitely say when they first became interested in becoming farmers.

"I'm a horse lover completely," said Miss Brochu. "I plan to open a riding academy when I get a farm, and keep beef cattle on the side. Whenever I can get out on a horse, that's my home."

In the course, the students are taught fundamentals of farm business management, bookkeeping, farm power, farm machinery, soils, crops, communications and livestock. Both women enjoy the subject of livestock, which teaches how to produce high-quality milk from dairy cattle.

There are about 30 women out 105 students enrolled in the four-year degree course in agriculture at the university but Miss Lord said women tend to stay away from the diploma course because of its practical aspects.

"A lot of the graduates of the degree course go into agri-business," she said.

Miss Lord, who has worked as a truckdriver, waitress and car hop, said her family is pleased she enrolled in the course.

"When I'm finished the course, I'd like to work for someone—that way I'd get holidays. Someday I might buy a bigger farm and keep livestock."

Miss Brochu said more women should enroll in the course. They should know how to run the outside of a farm, not just the home. If a husband gets sick, the knowledge would be useful.

'STOP' THE BABIES' PLEA FROM SCHOOL STUDENTS

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — High school students here are telling parents not to have so many babies.

Since students at Westlane secondary school formed a chapter of ZPG — the non-profit organization dedicated to bringing the issue of over-population before the public — ZPG Westlane has embarked on a campaign to inform Niagara Falls residents about ZPG which stands for zero population growth.

This year, ZPG Westlane became a chartered member of ZPG.

With its active membership of 12 dues-paying members, ZPG Westlane has been out on city streets spreading the word that over-population is fast becoming a pressing problem in the world.

The student organization kept its information campaign within the school until a few weeks ago when students circulated leaflets in city shopping plazas outlining the organization's aims and recommending that parents limit their families to two children.

Steve Coopman, a Grade 13 student, said people at first seemed skeptical but, when it was explained what ZPG was all about, people took the leaflets.

ZPG contends that if each couple has just two children, the population will stop growing. By having two children a couple reproduces its own number. They provide "replacements" for themselves.

Richard Lahey, chairman of ZPG Westlane, predicted that if people don't recognize the need for voluntary control of family size, some day in the future there will be mandatory controls imposed by government legislation.

Chuck Evans, another member, said he feels every major problem arises from over-population and if population can be controlled, many of the other problems in society can be solved.

ZPG stresses that none of the aspects of environmental cleanup — water, air and land pollution, waste disposal, conservation — can be permanently solved as long as the world's population continues to multiply in geometric progression.

An unchecked population can bring famine and disease, said Steve, pointing to the human misery in such over-populated countries as India and Pakistan. He added that Canada, the United States and Argentina are the only countries in the world today that produce sufficient food for their people.

Renewing Friends

One of the very pleasant happenings in my life as a columnist, is the renewing of acquaintance, from time to time, with those I've written about here.

At this season the friendly bridging of distances, be it only a few miles or the width of a continent, comes in greeting cards, with written messages to give the personal touch.

Tucked in with these cards there may also be a bit of a story or the fragment of an idea with a written suggestion that "this may be of use to you some day."

I've had several such messages this holiday season. One of which I'm going to pass on to you today. Mainly because the sender suggests "it might make a good story for a New Year's resolution."

Whether he is right or not, it will give you an insight into the concern of a father for a young son leaving the family circle back in a time we speak of as Victorian Days.

Perhaps you will remember that around the end of last summer I wrote a piece about two brothers, one named Dick Todd and the other Joe Fretwell, who had adopted the surname of his stepfather.

They were sons of the late A. E. Todd, mayor of Victoria in 1917-18. And they were in the city to renew friendships, see, relatives and visit old stamping grounds.

Dick Todd's home is in Seattle and it is from him that I received the following bit of history.

It's the copy of a letter he found amongst old-time effects only the other day. Written, he tells me, by his late grandfather, Jacob Hunter Todd (a successful pioneer merchant here) to his youngest son, Albert Edward Todd.

* * *

"My father was 12 years old at the time," Dick Todd writes, "and I would presume that this was at the time he left home to attend Upper Canada College."

That long-ago letter reads:

Victoria, B.C.,
January 25, 1890

"My Dear Bertie,

"I beg to commend the following to your most earnest attention. Let your motto ever be 'excelsior'. Be manly straighforward and truthful in all your actions. But above all truthful for without which there can be no confidence in your integrity.

"Love God with all your mind soul and strength and your neighbors as yourself. Be very cautious and courteous to and with those you come in contact.

"And be most careful in your choice of companions being very careful to avoid those of a vulgar licentious depraved and unmanly character.

"Be economical considerate and saving in your expenditure of money for you will find the great importance of having a reserve of money to draw on in case of necessity.

"Don't indulge in the practice of reading trashy books but choose those of a beneficial and instructive character.

"And may the good Lord ever protect you from evil is the earnest prayer of your loving father J. H. Todd"

There is little or no punctuation in this letter. Commas are conspicuous by their absence and every "and" in the sentences is in the short sign form.

Nevertheless the message comes through loud and clear. A father's concern for a young son as strong in its urgings today as it was over 80 years ago.

Did you promise yourself in those hectic days before Christmas to give a donation to the Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova "cup of milk" fund for the relief of Pakistani refugees?

You'd forgotten that silent promise? Well, you still have until the end of the year to make good.

Before you start to on your rouhds of New Year's Eve fun, remember those starving people.

Remember that $1 (less than the price of a drink) buys 50 cups of milk, or a warm sari, a blanket or loin cloth for those homeless ones.

Remember, too, that Dr. Lotta is depending on you. In former years you've never let her down. Don't do it now!

Officially the fund closes New Year's Eve. But for several more days donations will be accepted at any branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia or mailed to the Unitarian Service Committee, Post Office Box 66.

Mock Wedding No Joke

LONDON (WNS) — Angela Wallace, 15, borrowed a wedding gown from a friend, married 15-year-old Stephen Bright at church and returned to Forest Hills comprehensive school for a reception of cookies and milk.

Then, for better or worse, the bride and groom parted.

The ceremony had been a mock wedding staged by teacher Peter Johansen to teach the church ceremony to teen students. "Mock or not, I was very nervous," confided Angela. "I hope that Mr. Johansen's next lesson includes a divorce."

Egg's Worth Applauded

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (Reuter) — It is an egg a day, not an apple, that will keep the doctor away, says Adelle Davis, a well-known nutritionist and best-selling author.

Not an apple, not a glass of orange juice and not a piece of beefsteak. "But an old-fashioned egg — cholesterol and all," she said.

The silver-haired author, who wrote Let's Get Well and whose popularity has soared with youth's swing toward health foods, said: "The doctor may tell you not to eat that egg. Just say no thanks. You'll live longer than the doc."

Miss Davis also warned her young audience at the University of California at San Diego against being duped by food advertisements.

"Don't look at those ads," she said. "Why do you thihk those processed foods have to advertise in the first place?

The truth is processed foods can't compete with the basics.

"I wish food manufacturers could be sent the doctor bills for all the harm they do in this country. I'd like to see soft drink manufacturers take those costs on. They'd be out of business pretty quick."

Miss Davis said she is wary of beef because of chemicals used in the fattening process. Turkey, chicken and fish are fine, she said.

Sinless Sex?

"According to our statistics of church attendances, women are the more religious sex; and according to our criminal statistics- they are the less wicked." — British Baroness Stocks, on the ordination of women.

Horse Tribe Set to Flee

By HELEN MELNYK

Times Staff

The people of the horse are preparing to flee the hardships of the life of comforts.

They figure that living will be easier in the bush. This spring a small band of young people hopes to load to carts with their belongings and head their horses for a homestead somewhere in the Interior of B.C. Though they are sharpening their knives and axes for departure, whether or not they'll actually be gone next year is still a matter of uncertainty.

One of the tribe, a gentle long-haired young man called Tim Hume, told how it all began about four years ago. At that time he became convinced that the world was headed for perdition and that he wanted no part of it. Then, way to salvation was revealed to him. He had a vision of the horse nation going down the red road. In Tim's interpretation, this meant that the solution to society's ills is to revert to the Indian ways of living off the land with horses as the means of transportation.

There were other young people thinking along the same lines as Tim, willing to share his dream. Some twelve of them are now living at Sooke in an old farmhouse with Tim, his wife Linda, and three-year-old son Jubal, getting ready for the big day.

Holocaust Seen

"I get very confused and upset here in the city," said Tim. "My voice is not heard. I don't know why people go on this way."

The anticipated great holocaust will be a lesson in humility for man, predicts Tim.

When this culture runs itself into the ground, the few people that are left alive will go back to the simple ways of bygone days, he said.

Tim is trying to piece together the "wisdom" of the past by reading books on Indian lore, and by talking to them. He and his friends are learning to feed and clothe themselves, working as a tribal unit.

Denies Running

Tim denies he is on the run from society; leaving for the bush is the only alternative he can see. He doesn't delight in the idea of mankind's destruction, but hopes he and his friends can teach others survival.

Nature gives man all he needs, Tim says. As homesteaders, the band will exist by hunting, farming and raising some livestock.

Now they are making their own tools such as axes, harrows, ploughs and the wagons for their journey. Some know how to weave clothes. Though Tim admitted that they still depend on some of the trappings of society such as cars and rifles, he said they are gradually becoming more self-sufficient.

"All the wisdom is in the trees and in the sky," Tim says. "If man will listen to the Great Spirit, He will take care of him."

But supposing Tim were to find himself huddled cold and hungry, with his friends, and family in the woods somewhere, facing a long, hard winter? It take a while before the trees are uprooted and soil is fit for sowing. Even then, crops sometimes fail. Game is not always plentiful.

"It's going to be a big job," Tim admits. "When we find our land, first we'll have to build a shelter and get food. After that everything will take care of itself. You have to have faith."

When Tim speaks of his plans in a dreamy and wistful way he seems not unlike a child playing Let's pretend'. But then when he shows the axes he has made with his own hands, and the skins of the animals he has hunted down he becomes more credible. And, after all, the pioneers of last century managed to hack out an existence out of the bush.

Homesteading times have changed, however. Then a man could make almost any piece of land his own, merely by settling on it. Today, he must pay for using property. The old homesteading provisions have been phased out by the federal government. In B.C. anyone who wants to use Crown land must apply for permission to do so and pay an annual rental fee.

Provincial regulations will not bend to accommodate the visions of moneyless youth. And Tim and his little group have almost no money.

It will cost about $600 alone to get them and their horses and belongings off the island. Then they have to pay five per cent of the value of land they settle on as an annual rental fee.

And that's providing that their application for settlement on Crown land is accepted. Should they decide to buy the land they would have to pay the full purchase price. If the land is unsurveyed they'd have to foot the cost of having this done, which may run from $400 and up. Then there's the cost of clearing the land, and making the necessary improvements to meet the requirements of the government lease.

Stricter Rules

There is no way a person can get a lease on Crown land in B.C. without resources to back him, said Alex Smith, assistant director of the B.C. Lands Branch Service. Since the 1970 amendment to the Lands Act, the requirements for improvements necessary to be made on the land in order to obtain renewal of lease on agricultural terrain, have been made stricter, he said. Fewer applications are also accepted.

This is to ensure that the land is being used for development rather than speculation, Smith said. Anyone who bypasses the proper channels, by squatting on land, is trespassing.

So far the horse tribe is not doing too well in their fund raising efforts. By selling their handicrafts and skins at the Arts and Crafts Fair in Victoria last week, they raised $100. Even though they say they will refuse to lease land from a government when they feel it belongs to no-one, the group still has a long way to go before it has enough to leave the island. They will not set aside their ideals even to get haircuts and jobs to raise the rest of the money.

"We're heading down the red road and can't turn around. When a man has chosen his way, that's where he has to go."

Time calls the group's plan "the strategy to win the struggle for survival." Time alone will tell who's the fittest, the horse tribe or the rest.

Quebec Divorces 'Faster Than Marriage'

MONTREAL (CP) — Divorce in some Quebec courts is practically an assembly line operation, says a Montreal lawyer.

"You go in at 10:15 a.m. and by noon the judge has gone through 25 requests. You can't get married that fast."

Reform of Canadian divorce laws in July, 1968, allowed Quebec courts to handle divorce cases, cutting out expensive and time-consuming trips to federal courts in Ottawa. It also ended the prerequisite of legal separation which in itself involves legal action.

Today, a divorce can be had for $500 to $1,000 in as little as 3½ months if the case is heard in an outlying area like Hull or St. Johns where court schedules are not so crowded, says lawyer Christine Truesdell.

Since Quebec began handling divorce cases there have been 18,000 requests in Montreal and about 6,000 in other judicial districts, she says.

"The first year we expected a rush because people had been waiting years and years for a divorce.

"But the number has kept right on growing and it's not just young people.

"There are a lot of couples in their 50s who wanted to split up but waited until their children were old enough to look after themselves."

Divorce courts will not hear property claims arising from terminated marriage contracts however, necessitating further legal action in another branch of the Superior Court for settlement.

Phosphate Ban Upheld In U.S. Supreme Court

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Erie County's law banning the sale and use of phosphate detergents as of Jan. 1 has been upheld in state Supreme Court this week.

Denying Colgate-Palmolive Co, an injunction against enforcement of the statute, Justice Joseph F. Kuszynski ruled there was no evidence to suggest that state legislators wanted to overturn the county law when they passed a similar statewide ban that will not take effect until June 1. 1973.

The county legistlature passed a law last March containing a two-stage restriction on phosphates. The first phase of the law banned as of April 30 detergents containing more than 8.7 per cent phosphate.

The judge also ruled the county law does not interfere with interstate commerce, as the soap company charged, since it "involves nothing more than the changing of production facilities at the point of origin."

'Fat Prejudice' Spurs Program

There's the junior executive who gets to the airport and finds his flight is delayed for a couple of hours. To kill time he goes into the snack bar for a bite to eat.

Business lunches can be bombshells for the weight-conscious, too, whether the 'victim' is being entertained or doing the entertaining.

And then there are all those banquets where there is no choice in the menu.

The results are pounds, bulge, and in some cases a career that reaches a plateau and won't go further. As Dr. Henry A. Jordan, a young psychiatrist who has been working in the area of food intake and eating behavior points out, "some companies are prejudiced against fat people."

Fat business and professional men in the Philadelphia area might have an answer to their particular problems in an experimental all-male program being organized by Dr. Jordan, who is an associate in psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School.

Helping him is David Zelitch, a retired businessman who was executive vice-president of the Union Fidelity Insurance Co. He has a life-long history of difficulty keeping his weight down and wants to help others, Dr. Jordan said.

Dr. Jordan is training him to be a group leader.

The cornerstone of the program will be to have the men study their eating habits and then work on altering those habits so that they won't be eating so much.

In psychiatric terms the principle is called behavior modification therapy, and its relatively new in its application to obesity. A program for the obese using this principle is already underway at the hospital of the University of Pennsylvania.

With this sort of therapy, simple techniques are used to change a person's eating pattern.

● Split a meal. Eat half now and put the rest away for later. You might not want it then.

● Practice leaving some food on your plate.

● Eat only when you are seated at a dining table. That would rule out eating while reading, while watching TV or on your way through the kitchen.

"The idea is to make eating a pure experience," said Dr. Jordan.

"If it is associated with something else, it will occur more often."

Henry Jordan is interested in an all-male group because he said as far as he knows the self-help weight-losing organizations are mainly populated by women and men feel uncomfortable trying to shed pounds in this atmosphere.

All Edison's Employees Were Salt of the Earth

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the woman who was annoyed with her gentleman friend because he always salted his food before even tasting it, reminded me of something I once read about Thomas Edison.

Edison would always invite a prospective employee over for dinner. The first course would be soup, and if the fellow salted his soup without tasting it first, Edison wouldn't hire him.—Joe Goldstein.

DEAR JOD: Heaven only knows how many good men Edison passed up by prejudging a man because he prejudged the soup.

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to read about George who always seasons his food with plenty of salt and pepper before even tasting it, because I do the same thing.

I have been criticized often for this, but, Abby, I don't just "guess" the food will need more salt. I KNOW it will.

You see, I am one of those people who can't taste any seasoning unless there is a whole lot of it. And if the food had as much salt in it as I liked, nobody else would be able to eat it.

I just happen to like a lot of salt. Now, I take a token taste first, and then pour on the salt to suit myself. That way I keep everybody happy.—Pass the Salt.

DEAR PASS: I don't want to alarm you, but I am told that a craving for salt is nature-s way of telling you that you need to have a thorough physical checkup.

DEAR ABBY: After years of accepting congratulations and gifts on my birthday just for having been born, it suddenly occurred to me who really deserved the gifts.

After that, on my birthday, I sent my mother one rose for every years of my life. I enclosed anote, "With loving thanks." She knew who had sent them.

Now that she is no longer living, I send a contribution on my birthday, to my mother's favorite charity in her name. The card still says, "With loving thanks."—J.

DEAR J: Thank you for sharing a beautiful idea.

Fashion Show Held in Museum

LONDON (NYT) — "Fashion does not have anything to do with women," said the voice behind the single long-stemmed rose. "It has to do with artistry. It's just one long paradox."

The voice of authority belonged to Cecil Beaton, renowned photographer and costume designer of such period pieces as My Fair Lady, Lady Windermere's Fan, and Marguerite and Armand. Recently, he reminisced at home about fashion and its role in the 20th century.

Nearby, at the stately Victoria and Albert Museum, Beaton's most recent creation — an exhibition of the fashions of this country — is anything but a period piece.

"Fashion has a perverse truth of its own," Beaton continued. "It's in no way influenced by people outside it. When Chanel made clothing that looked poor — the kind of clothes you could ride the subway in — it certainly wasn't created for people who actually rode the subways."

Chanel is just one of the almost 100 luminaries included in Beaton's anthology. It ranges from the likes of Madame Vionnet ("a great practitioner; I didn't do anything but add to her glamour") to Yves Saint Laurent ("I applauded him when he was booted out of Dior just because he was in advance of his time"), to the current generation of young English designers ("they're not masters of cut, but they've got real brio").

The exhibition, which continues until mid-January, is only a sample of the collection of expensive and extravagant clothing that Beaton has amassed and given to the Victoria and Albert's costume department.

The results of Beaton's endeavor are presented in a plexiglas and chrome pavilion just beyond the museum's entrance. Mannequins model the clothing as they revolve around shop windows to tunes like The Lady Is a Tramp. Beaton seemed pleased with the effect.

"With few exceptions," he said, "I like all periods of fashion. What makes a style good is what makes it suitable and fresh for each instance. There is no permanent criterion or norm."

About much of today's fashion, the 67-year-old Beaton is enthusiastic.

"I love a lot of it," he said. "The brashness and audacity, the smack in the eye is very stimulating. It's great to see bright new boys and girls thumbing their noses at the conventional tenets of good taste."

"But I loathe the return to the 40's," he said. "It was a very ugly period — Hollywood at its worst from a sartorial point of view. Why anyone would want to wear a poor, rosebud-sprinkled, badly cut muslin, and look like a discarded starlet is beyond me. That tarty, poor look with clumpy shoes, black lips, and frizzy hair is quite repellent, and has absolutely nothing to do with today."

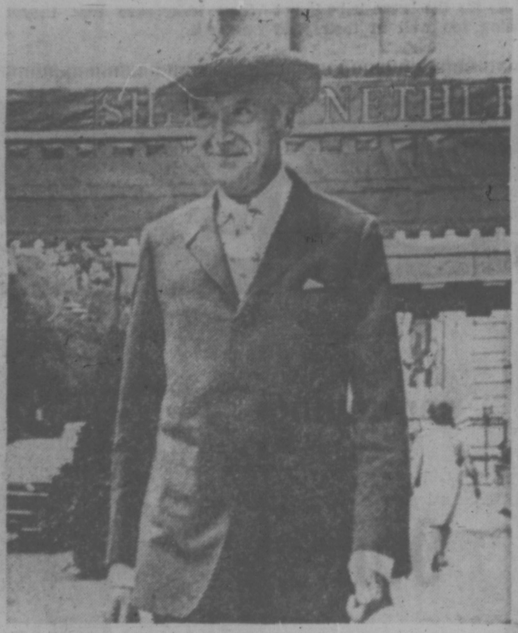
Beaton, who first made his name as a photographer for Vogue in New York in the early 1930's, maintains a critical eye on the more ordinary woman.

"American women do conform too timidly," he commented. "The woman on Fifth Avenue has no patina; everything is too new. She's perfectly dressed, shod, gloved, veiled, but merchandisers have taken control of her.

"But in Paris," he continued, "you almost never see anyone well dressed on the street any more. They have abandoned fashion. They're very realistic — life is tough so they've thrown aside the unessentials. They're more practically dressed: a good imitation leather coat, trousers, a very good scarf."

But is any of it really relevant any more?

"You must understand," explained Beaton, "changes in fashion have to do with a fundamental urge to express oneself; it's not just a question of glut. It's part of an instinctive need for something fresh and different."



Beaton, fashion's paradox man

Tulip Glass Loses Place

MONTREAL — Tasting experts have discredited the tulip shaped champagne glass as useless for quick and accurate appreciation of the wine's bouquet. Its replacement, they say, is an elongated egg-shaped glass.

Working with the International Standardization Organiation (ISO), wine tasting experts have recreed that the new glass must be made of absolutely crystalline matter.

The ISO also recommends that the glass contain no more than 50 mm of wine so that the volatile substances emanating from the sample may be captured for olfactory study."

Straw Dogs: Lust, Violence

MOVIES
peter mcnelly

Two smash westerns, The Wild Bunch and the Ballad of Cable Hogue had brought the 46-year-old American director to the periphery of fame.

The Wild Bunch, one of the greatest westerns ever made, was based on the same legends as Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid but without its flippant sweetness.

LUST, VOILENCE

Until Straw Dogs, Pechinpah had made only westerns, and this is why he is not as well known as he should be. Starring Dustin Hoffman and Susan George, his new film is a story of lust and violence in a small Cornish town.

It is a frightening clash of exploded psyches, a bloody heart-pounding shock wave of mayhem both fascinating and repellent. In the sheer intensity of its violence, Straw Dogs surpasses any movie I can remember.

The title comes from a saying of Chinese philosopher Lao-Tze: "Heaven and earth are not humane; they regard all things as straw dogs."

This suggests the film is not operating within the boundaries of Christian values. Peckinpah's own paganism becomes obvious soon after the story begins to develop.

Hoffman plays an American mathematician studying stellar radiation in England on a grant. His English wife Amy (Susan George) brought him to a stately house outside her home town, for she thought it would provide the quiet he required.

WEIRD

The townspeople don't like Hoffman: he's weird, an intellectual and a foreigner. One of the workmen fixing the roof of the garage at the house was Amy's childhood boyfriend. She entices the men to tease her husband, whose nearly total involvement in his work upsets her.

The work crew gets Hoffman out of the house on a hunting trip, so two of the men can rape Amy.

She keeps quiet, and the film appears headed for an unstable balance of passions and an ironic ending until circumstances trap the couple into a fight for their lives.

TOWN IDIOT

British actor David Warner has a fine bit part here as the town idiot. He is supposed to be a sexual deviate, but the story clearly shows him to be the victim of a teen-aged seductress.

When the young girl's father discovers his daughter has been out with Warner, he marshals the work crew into a lynch mob.

Sotted with enough whisky to fell a horse, they stomp to Hoffman's house where Warner is hiding. Here the awesome fight ensues for what seems like 30 minutes.

Peckinpah is working fast on the audience building irony upon irony as circumstances push the siege to more horrifying extremes. He seems to play with our emotions the way a master marionettist imitates life by pulling strings.

All the early tensions and small satires in the first two-thirds of the film flow together in an unstable, orgasmic concoction of forces.

ACTING GOOD

The acting is quite good, but is superseded by the emotions it releases. The people in Straw Dogs are scarcely more than cunning animals who regress in a classic Freudian mold to childlike destructiveness.

The most important imagery and symbolism in Straw Dogs is that suggesting children and animals. The film's last words hint of lost children.

Only on later reflection is it possible to understand how finely drawn are the themes in Straw Dogs, for the power of its violence overwhelms.

In recent interviews, Peckinpah has said man is essentially a violent creature. Straw Dogs, a superior combination of subtlety and savagery, is the director's finest expression of that belief.

HIGH SEAS FREEDOM VANISHING

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A Netherlands lawyer predicted Tuesday that the so-called freedom of the high seas will disappear in the 1970s because of man's "increasingly intensive exploration and exploitation of the oceans."

Albert W. Koers, speaking at the 138th meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said he hopes the last decades of the 20th Century will find oceans controlled internationally instead of becoming the private property of coastal nations.

"Shipping has developed to such a point that it has become necessary to prescribe special safety lanes, and stricter standards must be adopted to prevent pollution from ships," he said.

Koers said certain resources on earth — air, sunshine and those in the high seas — belong to all, and must be protected.

Mood Linked To ESP

PHILADELPHIA (Reuter) — If you want to learn to read the future you have to learn to concentrate.

Being happy sometimes helps, but you can also do it while unhappy.

Scientists studying extrasensory perception report a definite correlation between mood and the ability to perform ESP stunts in laboratories. They also have learned it helps if the subject relaxes before engaging in ESP activities, clears his mind and then concentrates.

In papers delivered at the convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, scientists have linked mood and alpha waves, an electric function of the brain, with ESP performance.

Dr. Gertrude Schmeidler, a psychologist at City College of New York, reports "there is a three-way interaction between mood, motivational pattern and the situational demands."

She found that some subjects who did well at ESP at some times, did poorly at others. The mood they were in apparently was the key. Self-confidence was vital.

For some subjects "both intensely happy and extremely unhappy moods were significantly associated with high ESP scores, while everyday, routine, normally content moods were associated with lower scores," she reported.

Thieves Jailed

HAVANA (Reuter) — Twenty-two Cubans have been jailed by a Havana revolutionary tribunal for stealing imported corn and wheat from the docks and selling it to farmers, the Cuban radio reported Tuesday.

Blakeney Bares Changes Succession, Gift Taxes

the prairies

REGINA (CP) — Small family farms and family businesses will benefit most from new succession duties, Premier Allan Blakeney said today while announcing proposed changes in succession and gift tax legislation.

Blakeney said in a prepared statement timed for release with similar plans by five other provinces, that the object of the legislation is twofold.

"First, we wish to raise revenues for provincial purposes from those best able to pay.

"Secondly, our rate structure and exemption levels are formulated in such a way that they provide for transfer of an average sized family farm or business with either no tax or a minimum of tax. The larger estates are taxed at a heavier rate."

LEVY OWN

All but one province, Alberta, have decided to levy their own succession duties in view of the federal government's withdrawal from the field.

Blakeney said the government felt this "tax on wealth" was the most equitable method of obtaining revenue that would have been lost as a result of the federal withdrawal.

The premier said the gift tax legislation will be virtually unchanged.

"It will be on the same basis, with the same rates and exemptions as those prevailing under the federal gift tax program."

Under the Saskatchewan plan for succession duties, effective Jan. 1, 1972, there will be three classes of beneficiaries.

"Preferred" beneficiaries include husband, wife, child, father, mother, grandfather, grandmother, grandchild, son-in-law and daughter-in-law.

EXEMPTIONS

The third classification is strangers and remote relatives.

The exemption for "preferred" beneficiaries will be $150,000 while "collateral" beneficiaries will be provided with a $25,000 exemption provided the "preferred" beneficiary does not take more than $125,000 of the estate.

The Saskatchewan plan provides that no estate of less than $10,000 and no bequest of less than $1,000 will be taxed. Property passing to Canadian charitable organizations also is exempt from succession duties.

Charges Withdrawn

WINNIPEG (CP) — Attorney-General A. H. Mackling announced Tuesday that his department was withdrawing charges involving discrimination and denial of accommodation against the Marlborough Hotel.

Mackling said a civil suit commenced by Dave Courchene, president of the Manitoba Indian Brotherhood, has been rejected by the courts. He said all the witnesses that the crown would have called on charges under the Human Rights Act were called as witnesses in the civil action.

Awareness Needed

REGINA (CP) — There is an urgent need to develop an awareness among Canadians of the role played by agriculture in the country's economy, E. A. Boden, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool vice-president says.

Boden, speaking recently to senior officials of the Saskatchewan Power Corporation, said agriculture in the province makes up 80 per cent of the province's total economic activity.

Aging Breath? Use Steri/sol.

Bad breath has a number of causes. Age is a factor—so are dentures, caps, bridgework, gum trouble and so on. But Steri/sol Oral Antiseptic does much to control "aging breath" problems. You see, Steri/sol is the only mouthwash with Hexetidine—the powerful germ killer that deprives mouth bacteria of thiamine. Without thiamine, the mouth-germs that cause bad breath cannot live.

When you are worried about "aging breath", rinse with Steri/sol. Steri/sol is specially designed to combat these particular breath problems. The germ killing action of Hexetidine starts immediately, and within 15 minutes up to 95% of bad breath bacteria are eliminated. And because the Hexetidine in Steri/sol clings to mouth and gum tissues, the bactericidal action keeps on working up to 10 hours to help you feel really sure about your breath.

Put Steri/sol to work on bad breath right away. It does cost more than you might usually pay for a mouthwash, but then Steri/sol is not your usual mouthwash. Sold only at pharmacies.

Clockwork Orange Named Top Movie

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Film Critics have named A Clockwork Orange as the best movie of 1971, and Jane Fonda and Gene Hackman best actress and actor of the year.

Miss Fonda was selected for her portrayal of a prostitute in Klute and Hackman for his role as the narcotics detective in the French Connection, based on the real-life adventures of New York Detective Edward Egan.

A Clockwork Orange also won the best-director award for Stanley Kubrick while the best screenwriting award, given to the film, not the writers, went to the Last Picture Show.

The latter movie, directed by Peter Bogdanovich, placed second in the best movie category with the French Connection and Sunday Bloody Sunday placing third and fourth respectively.

The awards will be presented Jan. 23.

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Jesus Christ-Superstar was the best-selling long-playing record of 1971.

The Three Dog Night's Joy to the World was the uost popular single record.

The Los Angeles Times based these rankings Tuesday on a compilation of weekly sales charts from the three top U.S. music magazines, Billboard, Cash Box and Record World.

The newspaper said all three magazines were agreed on these top choices except Record World in the single-record selection which recorded a tie between Joy to the World and George Harrison's My Sweet Lord.

In the country and western field, the top album seller was Charley Pride Sings Heart Songs and in soul albums Isaac Hayes' To Be Continued.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Keefe Brasselle pleaded guilty Tuesday to a charge of assault with a deadly weapon in connection with a barroom shooting in which another man was wounded.

Settlement 'A Constitutional Rape of Black Rhodesians'

By KENNETH L. WHITING

SALISBURY (AP) — Militant blacks are seeking to block settlement of Rhodesia's independence dispute with Britain on terms negotiated last month.

Spearheading the movement is the new African National Council or ANC. It rejects the proposed agreement as a "constitutional rape of Rhodesian Africans by both the British and Rhodesian governments."

The extent of ANC influence among more than five million blacks is not clear. But it is significant that top members of two banned Black-Power parties, the Zimbabwe African National Union and Zimbabwe African People's Union, have joined hands in the ANC. Black nationalists call this area Zimbabwe.

Bishop Abel Muzorewa, 46, the first black leader of the United Methodist Church here and the driving force behind the ANC, is highly regarded by many urban blacks. The government's action last year is banning him from tribal trust lands led to several protest demonstrations.

The bishop insists the ANC is not a political party but a united front formed to tell blacks of the "dangerous implications of accepting the proposals." He has described the settlement as a "vicious and subtle device" for British recognition of UDI, Rhodesia's unilateral declaration of independence.

MUST PASS TEST

The settlement does not become final until a "test of acceptability" is carried out by a 16-member British commission headed by Lord Pearce, jurist. Starting next month, commission investigators carrying notebooks and tape recorders will try to find out whether the British-Rhodesian deal is approved by the black majority.

No blacks will be on the commission. Lord Pearce was reported from London as saying: "It is difficult to find non-committed Africans to serve."

The settlement Britain arranged with Prime Minister Ian Smith holds the possibility of eventual rule by the black majority. It guarantees that effective power will stay in white hands for several decades while a formula based on income and educational standards slowly brings about equal representation in Parliament.

The Christian Council of Rhodesia has attacked the settlement in a pamphlet titled Think Again. It contends there will never be more than 60 members of Parliament and 13 senators for five million blacks, whereas 250,000 whites would have 50 MPs and 10 senators.

Winter Flowers Will Soon Beckon

With the shortest day gone, we can now look forward beyond the snow and glazed icy roads to the beckoning flowers of winter.

These I mention here will bloom in any mild spell, for excepting the hellebores the buds are well sheathed as protection in any weather.

Christmas-roses (Helleborus niger) continue blooming whenever ice or snow melts from their blossoms. A cardboard carton on the coldest nights does help; or a barn-type glass cloche in position over the plant for three months will ensure continuous flowers.

These plants do not like being moved. When moving is necessary, or when buying, do the planting around early April when blooming is near its end.

Helleborus niger is a durable plant, growing more floriferous each year if top-dressed each spring with leafmould and compost. Fifty years is not too long a known record, according to V. Sackville-West, an English gardener-author.

Seeds of Christmas-rose germinate 100 per cent within a few days if sown when ripened in late summer, but if kept for spring may take two years with about 50 per cent.

Planted where sheltered by other larger trees, but where winter sun warms the twigs, this adds more than an illusion of spring — it is spring personified as pale flowers adorn dark bare twigs.

★ ★ ★

This is Jasminum nudiflorum, which we should grow as a drooping or weeping shrub instead of trying to make it climb.

It is not a climber, has no means of attaching its growths to anything, and indeed flowers most profusely when encouraged to drape over a low wall or sprawl on a stony bank.

For a "weeping" shrub above a bed of winter heathers, tie the yellow jasmine's lax branches to a stout wooden stake about four feet high. Encourage new arching stems each year by pruning in late winter, and they will be festooned with yellow stars above the dark foliaged heathers. Both enjoy the same non-acid type of soil, winter sunshine, and shelter from coldest winds.

SOLUTION, THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

During the early 1930's one of our nation's leading players was the late P. Hal Sims. A story that he enjoyed telling about the opposite sex was the following.

At all tournaments, he would take a quarter out of his pocket, toss it in the air, and put down on the table with his palm covering it. He would offer to bet each woman who came to his table that she could not call whether it was "heads" or "tails." He offered two to one odds!

Since the odds are even, and most tournament players (of both sexes) are familiar with percentages, just about every woman accepted his bet. Sims claimed that he won his bet 19 times out of every 20. "I always put the coin down as 'tails,'" he explained. "A woman is constitutionally incapale of saying 'tails' if she can say 'heads' instead."

At the bridge table, Sims was very rarely outguessed. But in today's deal, he was outguessed not just once, but twice. And it was a woman who outguessed him! However, it should be stated that he was not ashamed of the misguesses, for the woman was the late Josephine Culbertson, one of the world's finest players.

The deal occurred in a rubber-bridge game, with the West defender being Mrs. Culbertson, Sims was the South declarer. Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

On Mrs. Culbertson's opening lead of a low spade, Sims put up dummy's jack, which East won with the queen. The six of clubs was then returned, West's ace winning. Back came the five of spades, and Sims played the board's three-spot, hoping that Mrs. Culbertson's spade suit was headed by the ten. Upon taking the trick with his ten-spot, East played back a spade, and West's ace took the setting trick.

Had Sims guessed to put up the board's king of spades at either trick one or trick three, he would have fulfilled his contract. But I imagine that Sims just couldn't believe that Mrs. Culbertson had the nerve to underlead the spade ace twice in a row.

It was stated earlier that 19 out of every 20 women called "heads" when Sims tossed his coin. I'll never find out, but I've always thought that perhaps Mrs. Culbertson was the one out of 20 who called "tails."

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. HUNTER

Susan had the map out. "There's Brent, 21 miles due north from here but no direct road," she said. "We must go due east to Corley or eight miles further due west to Durston. There's a good straight road from each of them up to Brent."

"Okay, let's take the Corley road," Mike told her. "We save 14 miles that way."

9 IN MEMORIAM

ANDERSON — In memory of our beloved wife and mother, Elda Mae Anderson, who passed away December 29th, 1970.
—Lovingly remembered by her husband and sons.

CLARKSON — Wm. T. In every loving memory of My Darling husband, Will, who passed away after a short illness on December 29, 1970.
It's been a long and lonely year
Since you were taken from me.
You had a friendly word
You were so unsparing of your time.
Gone and forgotten by some you may be
To me you are the dearest of all.
To have To Love and then To part
Is the greatest sorrow of one's heart
Without your love. There is no day.
Some day soon I hope to meet him
Never to part again.
—Your devoted wife Bessie.

INMAN — In loving memory of my dear husband, Harry Inman, who passed away on December the 29th, 1965.
We often sit and think of him
When we are all alone
For memory is the only friend that Grief can call its own.
Like ivy of the withered oak
When all other things decay
Our love for him will still keep
Green and never fade away.
—His loving wife Alice and daughters Merna and Audrey.

SWIFT — In loving memory of Edgar Swift, who passed away Dec. 29th, 1970.
—Lovingly remembered and deeply missed by his wife and family.

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Skyjackers Miserable in Cuba

Recently, a Dallas psychiatrist, Dr. David G. Hubbard, interviewed and studied more than 40 would-be skyjackers who are now in prison. He found that most of them tend to be rather feminine in appearance and behavior; often they are overly religious, and some have a driving death-wish; some know that they are courting death when they skyjack a plane, but they prefer such a death to suicide. Every one of the men interviewed said that if he had known that he would immediately be returned to America for punishment, he would never have done what he did.

These skyjackers would probably have given up any idea of skyjacking a plane if they had been able to read an article written by Fritz Sprendel, who wrote about how he blundered into Cuban naval territory in a canoe and was taken prisoner. During the two weeks in which he was in Havana, he visited with seven American skyjackers who had gone to Cuba and they were all utterly miserable. They said they had very little food to eat, and they had been trying hard to get away, but no country would accept them. As they said, today they have absolutely nothing to look forward to but a horrible boredom, a great loneliness, half-starvation and a miserable sense of futility.

SNOWMOBILE RIDERS

We are nearing snowmobiling season, and we physicians have reason to be concerned, because unfortunately we are likely to be called to care for persons who have been injured. In a recent article in the American Journal of Surgery, the writer says that the most snowmobile injuries appear to be sustained when people drive too fast. They add danger by sometimes drinking a bit too much before they start out, and this is a great handicap.

The part of the body most often injured is the leg — this accounts for some 46 per cent of the injuries. Next greatest danger is to the arm with the elbow involved; this accounts for 21 per cent of the injuries. Then come the head and neck, in 20 per cent of accidents, then the lower back in 8 per cent, and the chest and trunk in 5 per cent.

A NEW HEART MOTOR

As we all know, surgeons have been transplanting hearts from one person to another for several years, with the idea of keeping alive a man with a terminal heart disease. Commonly, such heart transplants have not worked well because of the tendency of the body to "throw out" any foreign tissue.

Accordingly, several heart specialists, such as my friend Dr. Michael DeBakey of Houston, Texas, have gotten the idea that it is more sensible to devise a mechanical heart that could be put into a man's chest. I have read that Dr. DeBakey was able to keep two of his patients alive with such a device.

Now I read that Dr. Kantrowitz, who was one of the first transplanters of hearts in the United States, at the Detroit Sinai Hospital, recently put an artificial booster-motor into the chest of a man of 63 whose heart was so weakened that it could not pump enough properly oxygenated blood throughout his body. This pump is about as big as a cigar, and its motor is made of silicone, rubber and dacron. It is six inches long and consists of two tubes, one inside of the other. This motor is driven by helium, a gas which is obtained from a compressed gas tank just outside of the man's body.

Hunter Pushes Game Identity

An experienced hunter said today that safety qualification examinations for B.C. residents seeking a first hunting licence next year, should include a test on animal identification.

Tom Zaccarelli, a director of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, said a person applying for a hunting licence should know his game animals and birds.

"I met people hunting this fall who told me that they had seen white tail deer when no such species exist on this island," he said.

"I saw people at Gold River shooting swans," he added. "Some probably didn't know the difference between a goose and a swan." (Swans are protected by law).

SAFETY TEST

Zaccarelli was commenting on announcement made by Don Robinson, assistant director for the B.C. Fish and Wildlife Branch, that as of April 1 people will have to pass safety qualification examinations in order to obtain hunting licence.

The proposed course is being modified, he said, in view of some criticism of the original program which called for a 20-hour hunter training, conservation and outdoor course.

"It was an error on our part that earlier reports stated an examination based on such an extensive course would be mandatory for all new hunters and firearms users in the province who have not previously held a hunting licence," he said.

SURVIVAL

He said the weight of the revised examinations, he said will be on gun safety and basics of survival in the woods.

As far as game identification, he said, this is still being considered.

He said a voluntary program of 10 two-hour classes will be available for those who wish to take it.

PRINTING BOOKS

Zaccarelli said he didn't see what a survival course has to do with hunting.

"It seems to me the importnant thing is for a person to know the difference between a human being and a bear," he said. "He should also be able to identify endangered species."

People who belong to hunting clubs are often blamed for shooting rare animals," he noted. "When these cases are investigated it is found that they have been shot by irresponsible people who have no connection with a game club."

St. Joseph Switch Hoped by Jan. 1

The Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society still hopes to take over operation of St. Joseph's Hospital from the founding Sisters of St. Ann by Jan.13, a society spokesman said today.

Society president Dr. A. J. Wood said the complex legal transaction involving four parties is almost completed, and even if the takeover proves impossible by the Jan. 1 target date, it will not be many days after that.

"It's in that last stage when you think everything has been done and then something else crops up," he said.

The parties involved are the society, the Sisters, who own the land beside the hospital being bought for expansion as well as a major equity on the hospital itself, the Capital Regional Hospital Board, which has had to raise the money for the land, and provincial government, which will hold title to hospital and land.

Man Pinned by Load Suffers Broken Rib

Basil Slater, 1441 Gladstone, was treated for the injury at St. Joseph's Hospital and released.

Police said the man was working in the hold of the Litija at the Ogden Point docks when the pulp load was being lowered by crane.

Ice Floes Sink Tug

The floes, which began to form after several days of cold weather, normally are carried away by tidal influence in the Fraser River at their junction in Coquitlam.

But they were frozen so hard Tuesday that they built up into blocks.

The pressure of ice ripped pilings at Le Clere and Collins shipyards near the mouth of the Pitt, and sank the company's tug Black Raven in shallow water.

Equipment Stolen

Arab Protest

AMMAN (Reuter) — The Jordanian Red Crescent Society has sent a cable to the International Committee of The Red Cross protesting against the continued deportation of Arabs in areas occupied by Israel, a spokesman said Sunday.

Major Canadian Problems Solved by Grits—Trudeau

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau says his Liberal government has met and solved two major crises since 1968 — the Quebec terrorist activities of 1970 and the economic situation caused by United States protectionist policies announced last summer.

"We have met them both, we have solved them both, and we have governed in the meantime," the prime minister said Tuesday in an interview.

During an hour-long CTV program, Trudeau said that under his government, Canada has done better in fighting inflation than any other industrialized country and has increased trade to record levels.

A byproduct of these actions was somewhat higher unemployment, but at least the country "had the best of one world" with only "perhaps the bad part of the other."

There is "no doubt that we've kept our word" on establishing participatory democracy, he added.

Throughout his time in office since the 1968 election, he said, he had "tried to strengthen Parliament, but I have not tried to weaken the executive and I don't apolgize for that."

Asked to take a look ahead at the next election campaign, expected sometime next year, Trudeau said he intends to approach the people much the way he did in 1968, not with specific promises such as "more dollars for old age pensions" but rather to indicate how his party would lead the country into the rest of the 1970s.

He added: "I have no intention of not running, if God keeps me alive."

The path ahead already has been shown by past activities of the party, Trudeau said, including regional economic expansion policies, anti-pollution measures designed to show "we are more interested in the quality of life" than merely higher industrial production and reform in law designed to produce more justice for the individuals.

Trudeau was asked whether the Front de Liberation du Quebec is finished as a dangerous force in Canadian politics.

"Well, yes," he replied.

". . . I can't guarantee that there won't be some cells of the FLQ which will again try and create mischief," Trudeau said.

★ ★ ★

But he noted that Pierre Vallieres, a former fervent advocate of FLQ revolutionary tactics, had admitted recently that violence was not the answer because "you can't get away with it with this government."

". . . I think the answer we gave to this particular outburst of violence has been successful."

On the U.S. economic moves, Trudeau said his timing was right on his December visit to President Nixon in Washington — despite opposition pressures that he should have gone much sooner — and the result was that "we got out of it exactly what we wanted in monetary terms."

The pressure was exerted after the U.S. announced last August a temporary 10-per-cent supplementary import duty in a move to whittle down its deficit in world trade.

The way the govenment handled the big overhaul of the tax system demonstrates that the people are taking part in the democratic process, Trudeau said.

The 739-page bill spent 50 days before the Commons and was passed just before Christmas after the government twice used a time-limit rule to end debate.

A white paper on policy proceeding the bill was before the public for more than a year, Trudeau said. There were presentations of briefs and discussions before committees of both the House and Senate.

★ ★ ★

Was this just a way to float trial balloons, sets of alternative proposals, with the government afterward just removing or modifying the ones that seemed too dangerous politically?

"Well, if that were the case, how do you explain all the screaming by the opposition that this is not a good tax bill," Trudeau replied.

"If . . . we had just done the easy thing and got a consensus surely the bill would have come by without any of that difficulty."

It was true that business and organized groups were quick to appear before committees in such cases as the tax legislation and that the salaried worker did not get heard to such a degree.

But it still was true that under the bill "about six million people in Canada are going to pay less taxes, and of them one million will pay no taxes at all, that had paid taxes before."

The government had backed away from some of its original proposals — for example the tax treatment of mines and other resource-extraction industries. But this wasn't because of pressure by a few vested interests.

Many provincial governments had said they would fight the bill to the end unless these proposals were modified, Trudeau said.

Trudeau, asked about the rapid increase in his advisory staff since he assumed office, said he "can't understand those who say that the executive of the country is too strong."

His government had strengthened the Commons committee system and given the opporition parties funds for their own research branches. Outside government, such groups as multi-national corporations and labor unions had also grown stronger. So had the news media, the universities and the academics.

"I can have six people in my office," Trudeau said, but in that case "I won't be able to follow any of the complex subjects which are being discussed in this government or in this country, and you will have a lousy, weak-kneed government."

"And if that's the kind of a thing that you want you had better elect somebody else."

Driver Shoots His Car . . . To Kill Deadly Snake

BRISBANE, Australia — Peter Clemescha swears he had to shoot his car to kill a snake, and has the bullet hole to prove it. Clemescha, a farmer in the Bollon district of Queensland, said the four-foot snake slithered in through the open door of his car while he was changing a tire 360 miles west of Brisbane. It crawled behind the dashboard and refused to budge. Clemescha then fired a shot through the dashboard, killing the poisonous Mulga snake without damaging the auto's wiring.

Mission Impossible

MERIDEN, Conn. (UPI) — The mission was to inform a family of a death.

Police Sgt. Robert Kosikenski and Patrolman Gregory Lewandowski walked up to the door without comment.

They rapped on the door to tell the family that Boston police had informed them of the death in a shootout Saturday of James Janz, 31.

Oscar Entries Deadline Friday

By BOB THOMAS

It's Oscar time.

Friday is the deadline for entries in the annual awards of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Inevitably, the last two weeks of the year bring a flood of previews, premieres, special screenings and visits to Hollywood by stars and directors who have made the Oscar hopefuls.

What kind of race is it?

Alas, not a very strong one. The year 1971 won't be registered as vintage for film quality. With such exceptions as Fiddler on the Roof and Nicholas and Alexandra, most of the film products have been "little" pictures, reflecting the penny pinching needs of the current economy.

Some of the little pictures, notably The Last Picture Show, have produced quality. But many were too drab or sex-charged, or both.

There is one reporter's assessment of the Oscar race as it shapes up now — probable nominees are listed more or less in order of their relative strength.

Best actress — Jane Fonda, Klute; Glenda Jackson, Sunday Bloody Sunday and Mary Queen of Scots; Janet Suzman, Nicholas and Alexandra: Vanessa Redgrave, Mary Queen of Scots and The Trojan Woman; Ruth Gordon, Harold and Maude; Twiggy, The Boy Friend; Ann-Margret, Carnal Knowledge; Tuesday Weld, A Safe Place; Bib Anderson, The Touch.

Playwriting Competition Being Held

OTTAWA (CP) — The Ottawa Little Theatre is again sponsoring its Canadian playwriting competition for original one-act plays in English.

The competition is open to resident Canadian playwrights, both professional and non-professional.

First prize is the Solange Karsh Award of $250 and a medal, the gift of photographer Yousuf Karsh of Ottawa. The winner will also receive a gold medal, donated by Henry Birks and Sons Ltd.

Second prize is the Dorothy White award, $150 given by the Ottawa Little Theatre. Third prize, the University Women's Club of Ottawa award, is $100.

Awards will be announced about mid-June, 1972.

Eligible plays must take a minimum of 25 minutes playing time and not more than 45 minutes. They must not have been performed or published prior to the date of the final awards or have received awards in any previous competition.

AFRICAN TRIBES CLASH; 24 DEAD

DURBAN, South Africa (UPI) — The biggest intertribal fighting in years left 24 Africans dead over the Christmas weekend in the Zululand and Transkei tribal homelands, South African police said Tuesday. At least 20 more Africans were injured.

Many of the wounded were carried into hiding by friends, a police spokesman said. Police arrested 47 Africans.

After one pitched battle between about 200 Beula and Bezeni tribesmen, the bodies of 11 Bezenis, mutilated by battle axes, were found strewn over the veldt, the spokesman said.

Feb. 10 . . . His Day to Remember

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

On that day in 1940 he joined the Canadian Army as a private.

On the same day five years later, then a lieutenant in the First Battalion of the Canadian Scottish Regiment, he was badly wounded at Nijmegen, Holland. He was in an amphibious troop carrier which was hit by a German shell and received head wounds, broken jaw and lost his left eye, many teeth and the tip of a finger. Fifteen were killed.

8% SIGHT

By this time he had only eight per cent vision, a $100 a month pension and a wife and small daughter to look after.

Although Burge led the life of a blind man for six years, he has overcome his handicap to lead an active life.

He has been tool-room supervisor for the maintenance department for the past 14 years at the Crofton pulp and paper mill, has just been re-elected for his third term as North Cowichan alderman, and is one of the outstanding curlers in the Duncan Curling Club.

Burge, 50, said after he left the army was "one of the worst times of my life. It was a terrible adjustment period. I realized I would have to settle down and become useful again."

'BLOW TO EGO'

His first job was making rubber mats for a Vancouver firm for 60 cents an hour. The job was arranged for him through the Canadian Institute for the Blind.

"Then I graduated to be employed by the institute as a concession stand operator."

Burge said he found his role at that time to be quite a change from working in a bank, as he did before the war, being a lieutenant in an army "and now selling cigarettes and gum."

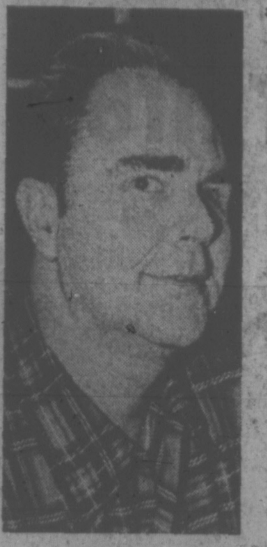
Later the CNB appointed Burge as field representative for the area between New Westminster and Golden. Along with the position the institute provided Burge with an office, a secretary, a car and a driver.



BURGE
. . . likes being useful

"I started feeling better then except for one thing. I always had the feeling that these types of jobs were made up. Someone with full sight could have done my job more efficently and would not have required a driver."

Burge said he finally became fed up with the life of a blind man and "decided the only way to satisfy one's ego is to make it on his own. I was tired of being treated as a blind man and naturally in this type of work I was. I resented it."

In 1952 Burge moved his wife, his daughter and young son, to Ganges on Salt Spring Island. A second daughter was born there.

"I decided to move to Ganges because my colonel Des Crofton, whom I have a great deal of respect for, lived there."

STARTED BUSINESS

Before moving to North Cowichan to work in the pulp mill, Burge worked on the local newspaper in Ganges as a reporter and feature writer and then opened his own business.

"It started off as a sporting goods store but I later sold and did minor repairs on televisions. I was quite successful at it."

Burge said he adjusted quickly to his job at Crofton. He is responsible for the purchasing, maintenance and distribution of all tools used in the mill.

"Always in an attempt to justify my existence I have taken on outside interest apart from my job," he said.

He was a Sunday School teacher and assistant cubmaster for three years before he became the commanding officer of the army cadets for nine years in Duncan. During that time he was promoted to the rank of captain in the army.

Burge said he became actively interested in council five years ago when he first ran for an aldermanic seat and was defeated.

The next year he was elected.

Burge skips when he curls twice a week. He has been able to do this through the use of a flashlight.

"I always look at the house of rocks and get a mental picture. Then I tell my teammate where to hold the flashlight," he explained.

Burge said he doesn't do any more reading than he has to because it requires a great deal of effort.

Convention Centre: Yes But Later On

Quaife feels that recreational facilities should have first priority.

He was replying to a suggestion by businessman Les Atchison that city council look into the idea of building a convention centre next year if money is available again through a federal-provincial initiative program.

As former president of the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce and current president of the Duncan Gyro Club, Atchison said he became acutely aware of the lack of convention facilities while planning an annual business meeting for Gyro clubs from Prince George to Portland to be held Jan. 28 to 30.

Quaife said that after a swimming pool and a large park, similar to Victoria's Beacon Hill Park, are constructed a convention centre could be considered.

"There is no sense in people coming here if we don't have either of these," he said. "The only real asset we have right now to draw people is the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum.

"I like the idea of a convention centre, but not now. I am sure it would be a boon to the area and a good investment but we have to look at other facilities that the local people require now . . . like recreational facilities."

PLAYING HOCKEY without ice—and even without skates—can be fun when the snow freezes into a nice slippery surface as these boys discover on Broome-Hill Golf and Country Club course on Otter Point Road in Sooke. Victoria's slippery streets are expected to disappear Thursday as a moderating trend is forecast, with temperatures near 40.

Air Attack Opposition Mounting

(Times News Services)

Opposition to the United States air assault on North Vietnam grew today as the defence department in Washington insisted that the bombing did not represent a return to the policies of the Johnson administration.

The heaviest air attacks in more than three years continued for the fourth day with no letup in sight. North Vietnam said four planes were shot down.

A dispatch broadcast from Hanoi by the official Vietnam News Agency said the F-4 Phantom jets were shot down while attacking "populous areas."

Hanoi says seven American aircraft were downed in previous raids since Sunday.

The leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, Senator Edwin Muskie of Maine, called on President Nixon to halt the bombing.

CALLS ATTACKS SHOCKING

Another presidential contender, Senator Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota, also demanded an end to the bombing and asked for an extended ceasefire through the new year and Tet lunar new year holiday. up to Feb. 15.

Senator George McGovern of South Dakota described the air attacks as a shocking escalation of the war and 30 Democratic congressmen sent a telegram to Nixon calling for an end to the raids.

As anti-war Vietnam veterans ended their occupation of New York's Statute of Liberty Tuesday in protest against the raids, others invaded Washington's Lincoln Memorial and were removed by police.

At the Lincoln Memorial the U.S. park police arrested 86 demonstrators who refused to move from the entrance. The protesters placed their hands on their heads in prisoner-of-war fashion and waited for police to lead them to waiting buses. They were charged with blocking the entrance to a building.

TO CONTINUE

In Saigon, military sources said the bombing would continue Thursday. Returning pilots reported seeing MiGs for the first time, and missiles.

The U.S. command reported the MiGs stayed at extreme range and said there was only sporadic anti-aircraft fire, indicating bad weather was forcing the pilots to bomb from high altitudes.

The ground war also intensified after a Christmas lull and reports from Phnom Penh said there were big attacks north and southeast of Phnom Penh and heavy shelling of South Vietnamese bases in the rubber plantation country along the border northwest of Saigon.

B.C. WON'T HIKE SUCCESSION DUTIES

Premier W. A. C. Bennett said today the B.C. government won't increase its succession duties to occupy the 25 per cent of the estate tax field being abandoned by the federal government Jan. 1.

Bennett also said we will have to wait until budget day in early February to find out whether any reductions in the B.C. succession duty are planned. But there would be no increase, he promised.

The provinces have all agreed to a uniform provincial gift tax to replace the Federal gift tax, he said. It would be effective Jan. 1, removing any possibility of large estates being passed to children of their owners without succession duties.

About 90 per cent of B.C. residents are unaffected by succession duties under current exemptions, Bennett said.

Russia Sending Help to Dacca

DACCA (UPI) — The Soviet Union and the newly-proclaimed Peoples Republic of Bangla Desh announced plans today to draw up a trade treaty and begin arrangements for Russian engineers and technicians to help rebuild shattered East Pakistan.

The plans to draw up the trade pact "as quickly as possible" were announced after talks between Soviet trade mission chief V. V. Zvreb and Finance Minister M. Mansoor Ali and Home Minister A. H. Kamaruzzaman.

The Bangla Desh government said it needed cotton and electrical equipment as well as cash and technical advice to rebuild agricultural and industrial production which Ali said was "threadbare."

India and Bhutan are the only nations thus far to recognize the state of Bangla Desh but the Soviet actions indicated Russian recognition would be forthcoming shortly.

BRING IN EXPERTS

The minister said "special arrangements" were being made to bring in Soviet experts and their families to resume work on projects started before the war, and help in economic development.

Zvreb said the Soviet Union could supply cotton for the Bangla Desh textile mills and was drafting a proposal for reconstruction of the jute industry, the country's biggest foreign exchange earner.

Zvreb invited Ali to visit Moscow for financial and trade talks at an unspecified date in the future.

STARVATION

It is reported from Narayanganj in East Pakistan that at least 30,000 non-Bengalis face death by starvation or at the hands of vengeance-seeking Bengalis. They are huddled in squalid ghettos inside the world's biggest jute mill at the town 14 miles from Dacca, protected by 400 Indian soldiers.

Indian officials said in New Delhi they believed a fight which broke the cease-fire along the western front of India and Pakistan Tuesday was an isolated incident and didt not indicate an immediate resumption of the war.

Egypt Ready for War But Willing to Deal

CAIRO (CP) — President Anwar Sadat told a political meeting Tuesday that Egypt is completing preparations to go to war against Israel, but he did not close the door on diplomatic efforts for a peace settlement, the semi-official newspaper Al Ahram reported today.

"The battle of liberation is a must and we have already taken an irrevocable decision for it," Sadat said.

"But the question of timing is connected with delicate internal and international assessments that are the competence of the leadership and not for public debate."

Sadat, who has pledged that 1971 will be "the year of decision" in the Middle East, spoke at a meeting of members of the People's assembly—parliament —and the central committee of the Arab Socialist Union, Egypt's only political party.

WILL BE LONG BATTLE

"The decision is now under implementation and the battle of liberation will be long and bitter," Sadat emphasized. "But it does not mean that political moves will be halted because to do so will paralyse part of our effective potential."

Sadat was strongly critical of U.S. policy in the Middle East and made clear he rejects suggestions for the resumption of U.S.-sponsored negotiations for an interim Suez canal settlement.

Sadat said he had received no reply to his accusation that there was a secret agreement between former president Lyndon Johnson and Israel on a joint plan which he said was still operative and was being implemented now.

Sadat said none of the U.S. officials had denied this report.

U.K. ANNOUNCES MALTA PULLOUT

LONDON (UPI)—Britain announced today it is pulling all its forces out of the strategic Mediterranean island of Malta, even at risk of a Soviet takeover.

The foreign office said the government decided on this action after Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, in an ultimatum received today, demanded immediate payment of another $11 million for the right to station British forces on the island.

Failing this, the foreign office said, Mintoff demanded all the 3,500 British troops, airmen and sailors on the island leave by Dec. 31.

British government sources said Britain and its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies are anxious that the island's facilities should not be taken over by the Soviets.

But the sources said they do not consider the island's strategic value worth the money demanded in Mintoff's ultimatum.

The Soviet Union recently signed a trade agreement with Malta and diplomatic sources in London said this was another step in the Soviet hope of establishing naval facilities on Malta for its growing Mediterranean fleet.

Malta has served as a naval base for the Royal Navy for 170 years.

Policeman Shot; Teenager Tarred

BELFAST (Reuter) — A British army doctor attended today to a 17-year-old youth who was tarred and feathered and tied to a swing in a children's playground.

The youth received medical attention after freeing himself and staggering to a nearby army post, a military spokesman said. Tarring and feathering is used by the outlawed Irish Republican Army to punish criminal offenders, but the reason for its use in this case was not immediately clear.

A policeman was hit in the arm by one of six shots fired at a patrol car 15 miles south of Londonderry in Strabane, and 35 miles farther south bombs damaged an electricity transformer and a cattle yard at Enniskillen near the border.

But the real focus of interest today was what appeared to be the collapse of a planned British Broadcasting Corp. television special on solutions for the Ulster crisis, under pressure from the British and Ulster governments. and a campaign against it by the London Daily Telegraph.

Eight of Britain's nine national daily newspapers front-paged the story and three—The Sun, The Guardian and The Times—commented on it editorially.

The program originally was planned to run for about two hours live next Wednesday with appearances by representatives of the Irish Republic government, the Belfast government and a spectrum of unofficial opinion including Rev. Ian Paisley and Bernadette Devlin.

London refused to take part, and Paisley dropped out Tuesday night, saying: "I accepted the invitation to take part on the understanding that the Stormont (Northern Ireland) government would be repre-

NIXON PLEDGES NO TROOP CUTS

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (UPI) — President Nixon concluded two days of summit talks with West German Chancellor Willy Brandt today by pledging there will be no reduction in American troops stationed in Europe.

The pledge was contained in a joint statement issued by the two world leaders following their private talks at Nixon's Key Biscayne villa.

He said he and Brandt were in "substantial agreement" on the economic problems facing the United States and Europe, and on the issue of maintaining troops on the continent.

To re-emphasize America's commitment to the Atlantic Aliance, Nixon announced he was appointing ambassador-at-large David Kennedy as ambassador to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

A-G SEEKS MORE TOP 'N' BOTTOM

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said today he wants laws enforced against topless and bottomless dancing.

"I'm bringing it to the attention of those charged with enforcing the laws," Peterson said, indicating he is primarily concerned about the situation in Vancouver where topless and bottomless dancers have been employed in entertainment clubs.

"As attorney-general I disapprove of this type of activity," Peterson said. He said a general increase in the field had been noted and was causing concern. He wasn't acting on any specific complaints, he indicated.

Peterson didn't specify how quickly he would like action taken or under what laws it might be taken.

Bank Gang Caught

SAARBRUECKEN (Reuter) — The ringleader of three bank bandits who led police on a chase across West Germany since Monday was shot and wounded and his two accomplices captured by police today, during a brief gun battle.

The end of a manhunt came after the bandits seized a 15-year-old boy as a new hostage in a bid to buy their freedom.

But the young hostage was not hurt when police attacked the trio of bandits.

The three robbed a Cologne bank of $97,500 Monday and fled from the bank with two police officers as hostages.

They freed the pair after seven hours and fled on foot into a forested area near the French border.

The three robbers, believed to be an Austrian, a Frenchman and an Italian, were chased by 600 police and helicopters and were at various times reported to be on the French side of the border.

The shootout today occurred after they seized a car and tried to escape.

Police said they would have needed 4,000 men to search the forested area into which the men fled. It was pitted with ruined bunkers and tank-traps left over from the Second World War.

Tracking Dogs Hunt for Clues

BURNABY (CP) — Police in Burnaby were using tracking dogs today to search the snow for clues in the murder of a woman whose body was found outside a restaurant here.

The woman, about 30, was believed to have been dumped from a car sometime during the night.

Shut Up, Get Dressed and Don't Touch

One Man's Formula For Staying Sane

PHILADELPHIA (Reuter) — Insensitivity to the world around him is the only way a sane man can cope with modern civilization, a Canadian psychologist says.

The argument for insensitivity is so great, says Dr. Lawrence La Fave of the University of Windsor, Ont., that he does not understand why sensitivity training through nude encounter groups has become a fad. He recommends insensitivity training through nudeless groups.

The psychologist running the group should be insensitive enough to get as many persons as possible in the group and clip them enormous amounts of money. That way the psychologist can set a good example.

The need for insensitivity is obvious, La Fave reports.

"Consider the merchant," he said in a paper delivered Monday to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

In order to "succeed in our sick, status-seeking, rat-racing society, he must be sufficiently insensitive to foreclose the mortgage on that poverty-stricken widow with 10 kids. The ladder of success is fashioned on human bodies."

"It is common knowledge that a surgeon should not operate on his wife. He's too nervous or emotionally sensitive to do a good job. . . ."

"A successful Bowery bum does not permit sensitivity to the condescending stares of passersby to prevent his hand from reaching out."

Athletes must be insensitive to pain to succeed. Prostitutes never become sensitive enough to give it away for free, La Fave said.

The answer is a desensitivity program. One must start with desensitivity to one's own hypocrisy, the psychologist said.

Desensitivity group sessions would help, but everyone in the session should be nudeless. Nudeness leads to sensitivity.

Instead of trying to get to know each other better, persons at such sessions would be given ear muffs and nose plugs and "are instructed not to taste or touch each other and to shut up."

La Fave's paper was delivered in a symposium on humor in science.

Bid Rejected

OTTAWA (CP) — The government rejected today an NDP proposal that all directors of the public Canada Development Corp. divest themselves of all other directorships because of possible conflict of interest. Finance Minister E. J. Benson said in the Commons that the corporation needs first-class directors. These directors would not allow themselves to become involved in any conflict-of-interest situations.

"It is common knowledge that a surgeon should not operate on his wife. He's too nervous or emotionally sensitive to do a good job. . . ."

"A successful Bowery bum does not permit sensitivity to the condescending stares of passersby to prevent his hand from reaching out."

Athletes must be insensitive to pain to succeed. Prostitutes never become sensitive enough to give it away for free, La Fave said.

The answer is a desensitivity program. One must start with desensitivity to one's own hypocrisy, the psychologist said.

Desensitivity group sessions would help, but everyone in the session should be nudeless. Nudeness leads to sensitivity.

Instead of trying to get to know each other better, persons at such sessions would be given ear muffs and nose plugs and "are instructed not to taste or touch each other and to shut up."

La Fave's paper was delivered in a symposium on humor in science.

Find the Right Words And History Is Made

I have been patiently waiting for someone with more competence to mark the hundredth anniversary of Stanley's meeting with Livingstone and the occasion of those immortal words: "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" but the actual date, Nov. 10, 1871, has come and gone and I mustn't let the year slip away without doing my duty.

You'll be wondering why a mere strip of a lad (me) should care about a man whose exploits took place a full century ago, but the bizarre fact is that if Sir Henry Morton Stanley hadn't lived and hadn't done what he did I wouldn't be sitting at this Remington Standard this red hot minute. He was my father's boyhood hero, the example that took him into newspapering, and my father was my boyhood hero and that's how it was. I'd have been happier, perhaps, if my old man had been inspired by J. Pierpont Morgan, but fate is funny that way.

Stanley's place in history rests on his meeting with Livingstone (at Ujiyi on the shores of Lake Tanganyika) and, more importantly, his later discovery and development of the Congo, but my father's interest in him was not as an intrepid explorer, but only as a journalist.

When my father joined the Winnipeg Free Press as a junior reporter he was fully prepared to travel to the ends of the earth to earn what Stanley, more than slightly egocentric, referred to as "the kudos." Instead, the Free Press gave him a bicycle and sent him out on the hotel beat. He'd have made Stanley a bum if they'd given him an elephant and an assignment in darkest Africa, but my father never regretted his choice and loved the newspaper business all the days of his life.

★ ★ ★

I was weaned, so to speak, on "How I Found Livingstone" and "Through the Dark Continent" and the other splendid books by Stanley. Come to think of it, my own earliest dreams of finding fame and fortune as a fearless correspondent were enflamed, I suspect, by that unforgettable scene when James Gordon Bennett, who owned the New York Herald, summonsed Stanley and, in just two words, gave him the assignment: "Find Livingstone."

Livingstone wasn't all that lost, mind you. He'd simply disappeared after 1866 on his expedition to find the source of the Nile, though he'd been pretty much abandoned by his sponsors.

The eventual meeting at Ujiyi has long since been neatly packaged by the anecdotal historians, those academic re-write boys who delight in retailing it as an example of British reserve and formality. In fact it was one of the most emotion-charged, poignant moments imaginable.

Stanley, for all his genius, was a loud-mouthed, arrogant, hard-nosed, harsh and humorless man, but on that night before the meeting, when Selim, his safari chief, brought the news that poor old Livingstone was waiting somewhere up ahead on the lake shore, my father's hero seemed something less than a man of iron.

"What would I not have given," he wrote later in his autobiography, "for a bit of friendly wilderness where, unseen, I might vent my joy in some mad freak, such as idiotically biting my hand, turning a somersault, or slashing at trees, in order to allay those exciting feelings that were well-nigh uncontrollable. My heart beat fast, but I must not let my face betray my emotions, lest it shall detract from the dignity of a white man appearing under such circumstances."

The confrontation, itself, was by no means as casual and abrupt as the legend-makers have made it seem.

Stanley remembered: "I took off my hat and said, 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume?' 'Yes,' he said, with a kind smile, lifting his cap slightly. I replaced my hat on my head and he replaced his cap and we both grasped hands, and then I said aloud, 'I thank God, Doctor, I have been permitted to see you.' He answered, 'I feel thankful that I am here to welcome you'."

I was always interested in that particular scene because my father had developed a theory that the meeting would never have occurred had it not been for that deathless phrase.

It was clear from his journals and the stories that he sent back to the Herald, in my father's opinion, that Stanley was more than once tempted to give up the search. He had been a full 14 months on the road, by way of Jerusalem, Constantinople, the Crimea, Persia and way points. The subsequent expedition into Africa in search of Livingstone was keeping him out of the public eye, far from the kudos he loved. There were serious doubts in his own mind if it was worth all the effort.

"Being a great newspaperman," my father would speculate, "Stanley had probably given plenty of thought to what he would say if, in fact, he met up with Livingstone. It was crucial to the story, you see, that the encounter should be dramatized in some absolutely classic words. He probably lay awake in his tent at night thinking of this.

"He could say, 'Well! If it isn't Dr. Livingstone!' Or he could say, 'Howdy! My name is Stanley!' Or he could say, 'You must be the fellow I'm looking for.' None of them, of course, would do. Then, as I see it, it came to him. 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume!' It had everything. It made the story, don't you see? And so he kept on and the rest was history."

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Remember when postage for a letter always cost five cents?

That was only three years ago.

Then the Canadian government raised it to six cents and took away Saturday delivery.

Now that you are barely used to that, the price will go up to eight cents starting New Year's Day.

The new rate applies to letters within Canada, the United States, its territories and possessions and the tiny French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

Big Workshirt Issue Still Burning Question

Victoria's so-called burning workshirts burn very poorly at best, according to deputy fire chief Carl Coates.

Coates said today that he bought one of the shirts at Zeller's department store Tuesday; tested it but found it did not burn well. The Fire Marshall's office in Vancouver is conducting further tests.

A controversy over the shirts began smouldering Monday after a Saanich man reported finding the nap of his green and black checked workshirt burning after he lit a cigarette.

Saanich police tested the shirt, said it was "quite flammable" and advised anyone who bought one to return it to the store.

But Coates suggested that people observe a cooling off period until the Fire Marshall's report takes the heat off — or turns it on — depending on how their tests go.

Coates said he wanted to point out that all materials are combustible, to a greater or lesser degree.

"Even concrete will burn," he observed.

The deputy said "the old match test" will give an indication of how a fabric will burn.

Coates said the workshirt had "minute particles" on the surface as part of the finish but he added that these would probably disappear in the first washing.

Development Bylaw Faces Council Rebuff

Oak Bay council's bylaw designating the controversial Windsor block as a development area is doomed to failure unless two aldermen have a change of heart, the Times learned today.

On Dec. 20 the bylaw was given first, second and third readings. It still needs final reading to make it law.

Ald. Brian Smith, John Goult and Shirley Dowell were against the bylaw. They argued that such a major step should not be taken in the holiday season when people are involved with other matters.

TOO SOON

They also argued that it was too soon after the stormy public hearing that resulted in rejection of a bid by developer John Mace to build two nine-storey high-rises on the site.

Deputy minister of municipal affairs J. D. Baird, confirmed today that a development bylaw under section 702A of the Municipal Act requires a two-thirds majority to pass its final reading.

FIVE TO TWO

In Oak Bay this means a five to two vote is required for to pass final reading. A simple majority is sufficient for first, second and third readings and the vote was 4 to 3 on Dec. 20.

Even if McLelland votes for the bylaw the impasse will remain.

Baird said the recently-introduced development legislation had only one main difference from that governing all zoning matters.

It does not require a public hearing.

This is necessary only when a developer and the council have reached the stage where a land-use contract is to be completed.

Mace has a proposition before council for a scaled-down development on the block which would include an inner courtyard, two four-storey apartment buildings, retail outlets and a service station.

TENDERS CALLED ON UVIC LIBRARY

The University of Victoria Tuesday called for tenders for a $3 million extension to McPherson Library.

Deadline is 2 p.m., Feb. 11, and construction, which will start immediately, is expected to be completed in June of 1973.

I. W. Campbell, acting director of campus planning, said today the extension, which will almost triple existing space of 86,000 square feet will end a situation where a half million books have crowded students out of studying space.

It will take care of library needs until 1981, and what space is not used by the library till then, will be used for other university purposes, Campbell said.

Sewer Cleanup Study Starts

A study aimed at cleaning up two major sources of sea and shore pollution in Greater Victoria is under way.

The Capital Regional District has commissioned a feasibility study of the Clover Point and McMicking Point sewer outfalls by J. F. McLaren Ltd., Ker, Priestman, Keenan and Associates Ltd. and Associated Engineering Services Ltd.

The firms, under project manager Larry McGill of J. F. McLaren Ltd., are expected to submit their report and recommendations by the end of April.

The regional board announced the study last September and said the cost would be not more than $80,000. The three firms were appointed in October but the maximum cost was raised to $95,000. The extra cost was necessitated by "the requirements of the study," said an official.

A general review of sewage disposal alternatives, by Associated Engineering Services Ltd. and Ker, Priestman, Keenan and Associates Ltd., produced a number of alternatives. The regional board narrowed this to two for the study now under way:

1. Diversion of sewage from Clover Point, in Victoria, and McMicking Point, in Oak Bay, through a connecting pipe to the new Macaulay Point outfall in Esquimalt;

2. Diversion of sewage from Clover Point and McMicking Point to a new outfall to be located offshore from Trial Island.

The general review put the cost of the first alternative at $9.2 million and the cost of the second between $10.1 million and $12.8 million; both including treatment plants costing $4 to $5 million.

The new Macaulay Point outfall, extending 6,100 feet from shore, discharges untreated sewage but land has been reserved for a treatment plant if studies show this is needed.

Clover Point outfall, built in 1894 and serving a major part of the city including down town, discharges sewage a few feet off shore.

McMicking Point outfall, built in 1913 and located near the Oak Bay golf course, serves much of Oak Bay and small parts of Victoria and Saanich. It also discharges a few feet from shore.

Ask The Times

Q. Please tell me about the Flying Scotsman locomotive. When was it built and when did it tour North America?—W.B.

A. The Flying Scotsman was built in 1922 and inaugurated the first non-stop passenger service from London to Edinburgh. A steam engine, it travelled the 393 miles in 8 hours, 15 minutes.

British millionaire Alan Pegler save it from destruction a few years ago by buying it from British Railways. By convincing the British government that the train would be useful to promote British exports, he helped finance its U.S. tour.

The Flying Scotsman began a 2,200-mile tour of 12 U.S. cities Oct. 8, 1969. It had nine exhibition cars, including pubs, the Royal Shakespeare Company, and two Edwardian Pullman coaches which were used by Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower during the Second World War.

Hunt Pressed For City Girl

The 55-foot RCMP patrol boat Sidney and the Victoria detachment's Grumman Goose aircraft expanded the search today for two persons presumed lost in a mysterious boating accident Sunday.

An autopsy to determine cause of death was being carried out at Surrey on the mainland today.

They were reported missing Sunday when they failed to return to a marina at Crescent Beach near White Rock on the mainland.

★ ★ ★

It was picked up by the coast guard Ready four miles north of East Point on Saturna Island, a distance of between eight and 10 miles from where the body was found.

Maj. Gordon Bissell of the Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre said the cause of the accident was still a mystery.

"There were no burn marks on either the body or the debris to indicate an explosion," he said.

He suggested the boat may have been run down by a large vessel during darkness.

Metro Health Board Fades Out of '71

Disappearance in '72 Debated

Greater Victoria's metro health board wobbled through its final meeting of the year Tuesday with members agreed the board should disappear but unsure how.

In a pattern which has become traditional in recent months, most issues were pushed on to the next meeting, which in this case means to the new board for 1972.

The longest debate centred on how the health board can shift its job to the Capital Regional Board, a move first proposed about five years ago and actively sought for almost two years.

The transfer has been delayed by lengthy negotiations with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark over a cost-sharing formula. The province has offered to pay two-thirds of the costs with participating municipalities and districts paying the other third.

The board, which represents municipalities and districts from the Gulf Islands to Port Renfrew, has been arguing for a 30-70 split, approximately the basis of current cost-sharing.

Throughout the months of debate there has been growing impatience among Victoria, Esquimalt and Oak Bay representatives because the current formula has Saanich paying less than its proportionate share.

"I believe it to be hopeless at the present time," board chairman Frank Waring said Tuesday of the current administrative set-up.

Direct discussions with Loffmark had failed to budge the provincial government on its cost-sharing offer and Waring said he believed the transfer should take place in any event and an appeal to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell or the cabinet made over cost-sharing at a later date.

All parties, including the province, have agreed moving public health care under the wing of the regional board is a good idea, he said.

But when members came to vote on a resolution to get it under way, there were differences over how and an unwillingness to concede to the provincial cost-sharing offer.

A motion for board members to recommend to their parent bodies that regionalization be proceeded with immediately and to have the cost-sharing issue passed to the regional board was defeated 4-3. Some members wanted the offered formula referred to in the motion and others wanted the sought-after formula specified.

In the end members simply referred the matter to the next meeting, something they have been doing with a number of questions this year as the changeover appeared imminent.

Another issue which took a rough ride before being deferred was proposed regulations governing health conditions at marinas.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, the board's senior public health officer, had drafted the proposals with the idea the board would endorse and propose to the provincial government that they be passed to cover all B.C.

But both North Saanich and Oak Bay councils had argued the matter should be left as a municipal responsibility and there were arguments Tuesday that Whitbread already had authority to enforce health regularions because most waterfront municipalities had extended their jurisdiction 1,000 feet from shore.

Whitbread said there are no health regulations because applying to marinas and he did not have the power to enforce health regulations there.

The matter was put over until he has a chance to clarify the limits of his jurisdiction.
